Laetrile, abortion vetoes nixed

by STEVE BROWN
of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — Ignoring party loyalties, the Illinois House rejected Gov. James R. Thompson's vetoes of bills on the emotion charged issues of legalizing Laetrile and banning state payments for abortions for the poor.

The twin setbacks were not totally unexpected. However, State Rep. Donald L. Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, the Laetrile sponsor, said he was not sure he had enough votes until the 123-43-5 roll call was completed.

Tottenand State Rep. Harry Leinenweber, R-Joliet, sponsor of the abortion payment bill, predicted similar success for the measures in the Illinois Senate later this month.

THE DOUBLE BLOW to the governor's prestige in the legislature came after several months of intense lobbying by administration officials.

On the abortion payment ban, which passed 126 to 42, Leinenweber argued the move represented a change in public policy favored by the majority of the people in the state.

"Right now many people want to adopt children, but none are available, there are people who will take any children that are unwanted," he said.

In ssupporting the governor, State Rep. Richard Mugalian, D-Palatine, contended the ban represented "a private assertion of judgment morality."

He said the measure violates the concept that all citizens should be treated alike.

LEINENWEBER said if the Senate also rejects Thompson's veto, Illinois will join Missouri, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts in limiting government payments for abortion.

The abortion issue is being heatedly discussed not only in Illinois but in Congress as well. The U.S. Senate Thursday passed a proposal limiting federal funding of abortions for poor women to special cases, but the House, seeking tighter restrictions rejetced the measure of a 193-172 vote.

The House action means the four-month long impasse on the explosive issue will continue.

Rep. George Mahon, D-Tex., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, told his colleagues it was time to compromise because he feared the House could not win further concessions on the issue from the Senate.

"This solution is not satisfactory to the House, not satisfactory to the Senate and certainly not acceptable to George Mahon, but we have the problem of trying to settle this issue because we can't go on forever," he said.

MAHON CALLED the measure "the best that we could work out, and you've got to take it or leave it."

The Senate had voted 62 to 27 to allow federal funding of abortions for a victim of rape or incest or for a woman whose life or long-term health is endangered.

But Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., author of current law that allows federally funded abortions only to save a woman's life, said, "I don't think it's lan-

No city-suburb busing: Califano

by KURT BAER

HEW Sec. Joseph A. Califano Jr. said Thursday he is not interested in areawide programs to desegregate Chicago schools, plans that might involve busing students between Chicago and the suburbs.

"As far as we're concerned at HEW, we have to go step by step, inch by inch. Our first focus is on improving education in the central cities.

"To the extent that you see metropolitan-wide desegregation plans, they will come from the courts," he told reporters at a press conference in the new Social Security building in Chicago.

CALIFANO WAS in Chicago to say that the Carter administration is committed to improving inner city high schools.

He also attended the swearing in of former Chicago Ald. Christopher B. Cohen as the new head of HEW's Chicago regional office and visited Whitney Young High School in Chicago, a magnet school that draws students from all parts of the city.

Califano voiced support for the following programs to boost inner city high schools:

- Magnet schools such as Whitney Young that can attract motivated students.
- Work-study programs that "would let a student take six months, or a year off and come back to high school without being considered a drop out."
- Partnerships between high schools and university professional schools to develop para-professional training in medicine, law, architecture and education.

"WE'VE GOT TO deal with secondary education and we've got to deal with it fast. Every four years we lose one generation of high school students," Califano said.

He said he was distressed by city high schools that have security guards at the doors and students who have to wear ID badges.

"The problem," he acknowledged, "is essentially local. We (HEW) can't educate, but we can provide resources."

Califano said he thought Chicago and HEW could agree "within a year" on an acceptable plan to desegregate city schools, and he said he hoped Chicago would never lose federal funds because of school segregation.

On ther subjects, Califano defended preferential admission policies for blacks and other minorities seeking admission to U.S. medical schools. However, he declined to comment on the so-called reverse discrimination case of Allan Bakke, a white student who was denied admission to the University of California Medical School at Davis.

"IF YOU ARE A black man in this country, the odds are 50 per cent that you won't make it to age 65 and live to be entitled to Social Security.

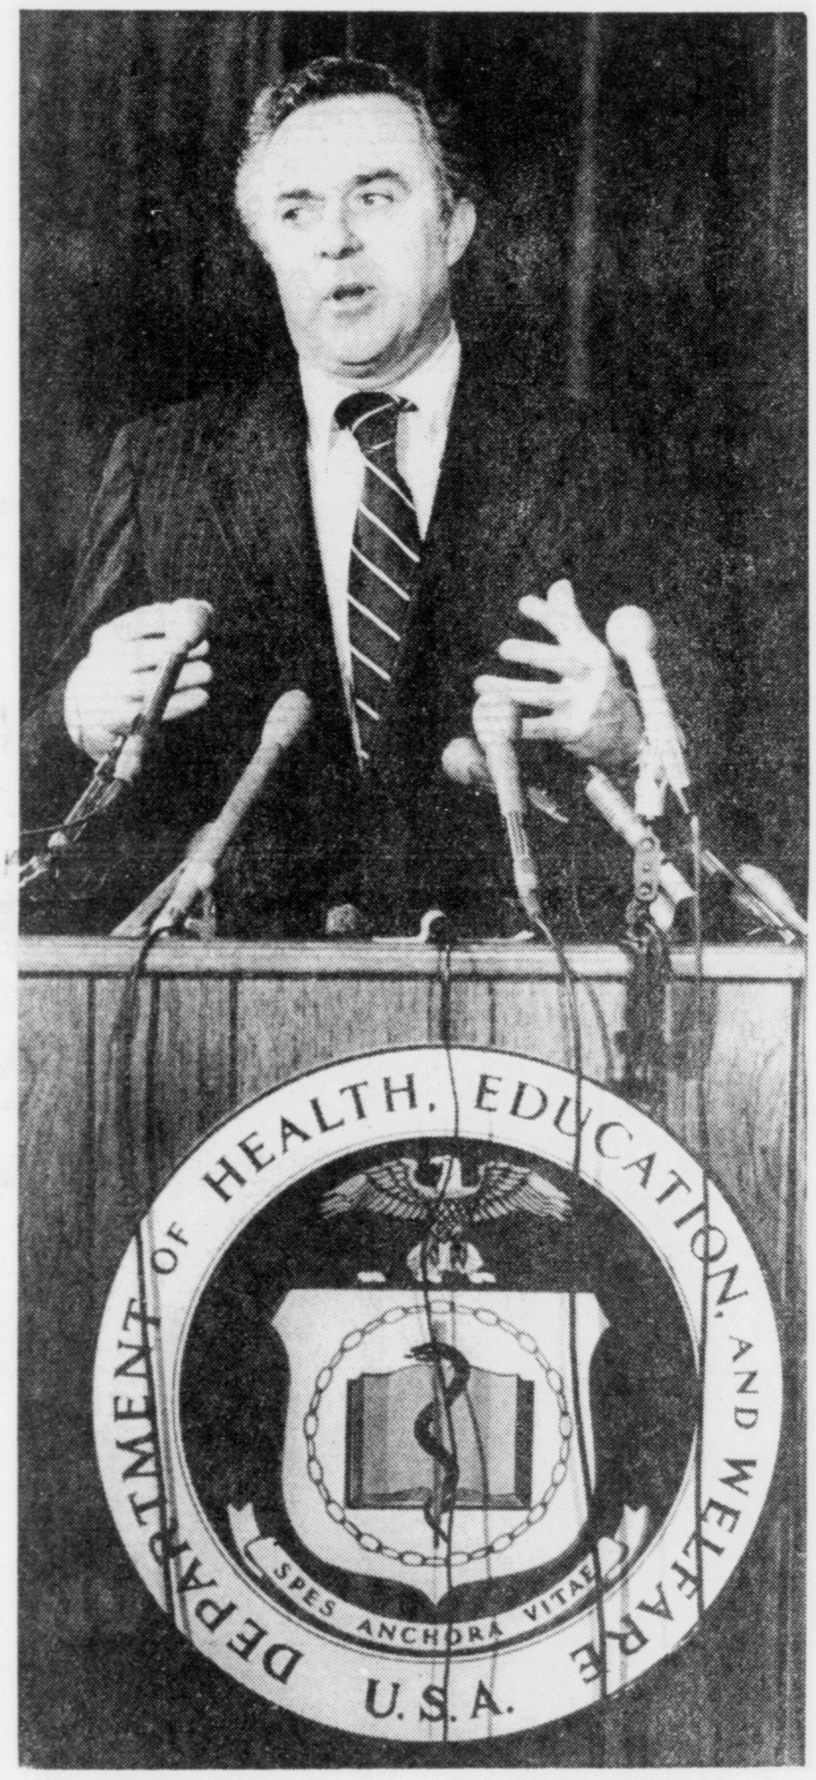
"If you are a black woman who is pregnant, you are 69 per cent more likely to die giving birth to your child.

"You cannot tell me that the low level of medical service to the black population is not affected by the fact that we do not have more black doctors in the community," Califano told reporters.

On the subject of Medicaid, Califano said he wanted to simplify the federal program and help state public aid departments eliminate waste.

Califano told a Senate subcommittee this week that $2 billion in Medicaid funds was wasted in the country last year, 60 per cent of it because government employes made mistakes administering the aid.

He also said that HEW has no intention of trying to tell states that they must use public aid money to pay for abortions.



HEW SEC. Joseph A. Califano Jr. in Chicago Thursday said he is not interested in pushing city-suburban plans for school desegregation.

Unit formed on track conditions

by BILL HILL
and TONI GINNETTI

A special committee to monitor conditions on the backstretch at Arlington Park Race Track has been created, subject to approval Monday by the Arlington Heights Village Board.

The creation of the committee comes as the result of an investigation this summer by The Daily Herald that detailed how substandard living conditions were allowed on the race track backstretch where workers reside, as well as housing, safety and fire code violations.

Living conditions, health and welfare, recreation facilities, crime and fire protection on the backstretch will get continuous review by the committee, which will be headed by Arlington Heights Village Trustee Robert H. Miller.

OTHER MEMBERS of the committee are: Lucy Reum, chairwoman of the Illinois Racing Board; State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights; Frederic Ford, a member of the Arlington Heights Housing Commision; and L.A. Hanson, Arlington Heights' village manager.

Joseph Joyce, president of Arlington Park-Washington Park Racetracks Corp., will be invited to participate in all committee discussions.

"It is my belief that the backstretch is not in compliance with the standards established by the village in 1974," Hanson said in a memorandum issued Thursday to village trustees.

Hanson also announced two additional measures related to improving backstretch conditions. Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau has been requested to actively pursue the need for counseling of backstretch personnel and a housing counselor from Northwest Opportunity Center has been directed to work with race track officials to assure that families turned away from the backstretch are properly informed of other housing opportunities and to provide emergency aid if needed.

TWO STATE LEGISLATIVE committees, including one headed by Mrs. Chapman, have announced they will investigate living conditions on the backstretch.

Insanity verdict ruled on accused torch slayer

LASING, Mich. (UPI) — Accused torch slayer Francine Hughes was found innocent by reason of insanity Thursday, but the verdict was less than a total victory for feminists hoping for a landmark ruling on a woman's right to fight back against domestic abuse.

The jury of 10 women and two men took 5½ hours to reach its decision. The 30-year-old mother of four will be freed if she clears a psychiatric examination.

Mrs. Hughes, who had been charged with first degree murder in the March 9 slaying of her former husband, James, burst into happy tears when jury foreman Jeffrey Hill announced the verdict. She reached across the defense table and hugged her attorney, Byron Greydanus.

Francine Hughes

HER FOUR children, mother and sister all cried and kissed and hugged one another.

The fair-skinned, brown-eyed woman readily admitted that while Hughes was sleeping she doused his bedroom with gasoline and lighted it. She argued, however, that Hughes drove her to commit the crime by beating, threatening, choking and chasing her with knives during a 13-year period.

Mrs. Hughes has spent the past eight months in jail.

Ingham County Circuit Judge Ray C. Hotchkiss said he doubted the verdict would set any real precedent, since Mrs. Hughes' history of prolonged and increasingly severe beatings probably was atypical among abused wives.

"I think this is not the typical wife beating case," Hotchkiss said.

"I doubt very many wives are living with unemployed, mentally ill or mentally deranged men."

FEMINISTS, including members of the National Organization for Women, had hoped for a clearcut acquittal. The element of temporary insanity in the Hughes verdict puts into question their desire for a precedent on the self-defense rights of battered women.

Greydanus said, however, the decision could prove significant despite that.

"It depends on how other layers and courts use the case," Greydanus said.

"As far as women are concerned it could very well be a rallying point that when such a condition exists a woman has a right to defend herself — although maybe not to this extent."

Hotchkiss had told the jurors they had a choice of 10 verdicts — including innocent by reason of insanity and guilty for first degree murder, second degree murder or manslaughter.

In closing arguments, defense attorney Aryon Greydanus called the 30-year-old mother of four "a pitiful creature" who finally defended herself from "inhuman" abuse endured for 13 years.

Prosecutor Martin Palus had said there was no doubt that on March 9 Mrs. Hughes poured gasoline under the bed of James Hughes and lit it while he was asleep.

Retail price increase expected in suburbs soon

Reports from the Labor Dept. Thursday that wholesale prices were up dramatically in October came as no surprise to Northwest suburban businessmen.

The only question in their minds is how long it will be before area retailers decide to pass on the increases to consumers.

"We get price increases on a daily basis from everyone we buy from. The last 15 months we've seen more of it than we've seen in the past," said Rich Maday, sales manager for the Ace Pecan Co., Elk Grove Village.

THE LABOR DEPT. reported wholesale prices rose 0.8 per cent in October, the largest increase in six months. The rise translates into a 9.6 per cent annual increase, something that could trigger double-digit inflation in the coming months.

The Labor Dept. also report a 0.3 per cent increase during October for food ready for consumer sale, the first increase in five months.

Processed food that is canned, jarred or frozen, rose 0.8 per cent.

GOODS THAT cost $100 at the wholesale level a decade ago now cost $196.30, said the Labor Dept.

Increases in costs to wholesalers are passed on to retailers such as the local grocery or clothing store that in turn must eventually pass them on to the average consumer.

"Although wholesale prices go up, consumers don't feel it immediately," said Jim Roberts, owner of the Westgate Market in Arlington Heights. But if such prices continue to rise, Roberts and other merchants will be forced to increase prices.

"We'll change meat prices only if they continue to rise," said Kurt Richards, owner of the Grove Court Meats in Buffalo Grove.

"EVERYTHING IS going up, flour is up, sugar is up, oil is up, shortening is up. If we pay it today, we have to pass it on to the bakery when the products arrive. Bakers should raise their prices then, in about a week, but they may not," said the purchasing director for L. Karp & Sons, an Elk Grove firm, which sells bakery supplies to area bakeries.

October increases can be traced to increasing labor costs and the scarcity of some commodities such as beef, said Bernard Peterson, president of Wayco Foods, Inc. Elk Grove Village.

"Labor forces material costs up, material costs force the finished product costs up and we go on the merry-go-round," Peterson said.

FOOD READY for consumer sale rose 0.3 per cent in October, the first increase in five months, while processed foods were up 0.8 per cent, the Labor Dept. reported.

Processed foods are beginning to reflect the result of earlier farm shortages. Higher farm prices were blamed on oil seeds, livestock, fresh and dried fruits and vegetables, grains and live poultry, the Labor Dept. reported.

Higher price supports and speculation on new Soviet grain purchases also contributed to higher grain prices.

Peterson said that the Labor Dept.'s statistics should be viewed with some caution because they include prices for only about 125 items.

"A supermarket sells maybe 5,000 to 6,000 items, so it's a very small percentage of the total," that the Labor Dept. examines, Peterson said.

October brought the biggest price increase in the wholesale market since a 1.1 per cent increase in April.

Kidco chief, 12, learns ropes of legal world fast

RAMONA, Calif. (UPI) — Twelve-year-old corporation president Richard Cessna Jr. thinks state bureaucrats are bent on running his firm out of business.

Earlier this year the state Tax Board hauled Cessna and the rest of the youthful directors of their company, Kidco, in for a conference to discuss their nonpayment of taxes on the sale of horse manure.

Now the state Dept. of Agriculture says Kidco can't go around killing gophers for $1 a head unless it gets a state license and registers its secret formula for killing them.

THE PROBLEM, young Cessna said, is the $50 state permit can't be issued to anyone under 18.

When the Agriculture Dept. man visited the young executives of the corporation — run by Richard, his, sisters, NeNe 9, Bette, 11, and half-sister June Cole, 14 — they voted on the spot to refuse to share their trade secret.

Said Cessna, "We do not think our secret weapon for killing gophers should have to be resigistered because it is not on any of your lists and because our secret weapon is made from chemicals that everybody's mom has in her kitchen."

The young president wrote to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.: "We do not think it is fair or any good because we are just some little kids who want to do a good job killing gophers and selling manure instead of being out with a gang of other kids getting in dutch. Still we seem to be in trouble all the time thanks to some dumb laws."

CIA plot to kill Jamaican chief alleged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA last year made three attempts to kill Jamaica's leftist prime minister, Michael Manley, according to a Penthouse magazine article published Thursday.

The CIA broke its traditional no-comment rule to call the allegations "absolutely untrue."

A spokesman for the Senate Intelligence Committee, which is assigned to oversee CIA operations, said the panel "is making a preliminary inquiry into the allegations" because it must check "allegations of all sorts."

MANLEY, WHO WAS in Sweden, said he believes the CIA meddled in Jamaican affairs last year. But he declined to link the agency directly to any plots on his life, saying only, "I can confirm not a shot was fired."

Reporters Ernest Vokman and John Cummings, both of the Long Island, N.Y., newspaper Newsday, alleged in their December Penthouse article that the CIA murder plots against Manley were supposed to take place July 14 and Dec. 15, 1976, in Jamaica, and Sept. 23 in Toronto.

"It was only a combination of CIA ineptitude, luck and circumstances that enabled Manley and his government to avoid collapse and, at worst, Manley's death," they said.

They quoted U.S. intelligence officials as estimating the agency spent at least $10 million on a combined operation aimed at killing Manley and sabotaging the Caribbean island's economy.

THEY SAID THEY got their information from "senior American intelligence sources" and foreign agents for nations "friendly to the United States."

The authors said Sec. of State Henry Kissinger, with President Gerald Ford's approval, decided to mount a "secret war" against Manley and his government for two reaons: Its increasingly friendly relations with Cuba and its threats to interfere with U.S.-Canadian bauxite supplies.

Bauxite is aluminum ore. Much of America's supply is mined in Jamaica.

Describing the alleged July 14 assassination plot, the article accused the agency of recruiting disaffected members of Manley's army, who stopped him at a roadblock in the Jamaican interior.

"THE SOLDIERS looked nervous so Manley immediately began shouting orders at a major," it said. "Temporarily flustered, the major and his soldiers hesitated and Manley calmly sped away before anyone could react."

On Sept. 23, the article said, the CIA sent Cuban exiles to shoot Manley as he addressed a rally of expatriate Jamaicans in Toronto.

"But the arrival of known Cuban exiles in Canada tipped off Canadian security officials that something was up," it said. " . . . The CIA, realizing that the cover had blown, canceled the operation."

In the Dec. 15 attempt, it said, agents released from prison "a frozen, hardened gunmen who were then rearmed and moved toward Jamaica Government House, which contained Manley's office and quarters.

"AGAIN, MANLEY'S luck held out. The gunmen . . . fell to quarreling among themselves, some security forces personnel returned to help out, and Manley took advantage of the temporary disarray to flee his quarters and hide out until the crisis passed."

The authors said CIA activities in Jamaica have "markedly diminished" since President Carter took office. Mrs. Carter has paid a good will visit to Manley on the island.

Manley said Thursday U.S.-Jamaican relations are "very cordial."

Police begin tests for blood on car of missing woman

Authorities Thursday began tests to determine if two small blood stains found on a car parked at O'Hare Airport belong to the vehicle's owner, a 39-year-old Palatine woman who has been missing since Oct. 25.

The stains found on the passenger door handle and front seat of a car owned by Stephanie Lyng, 1328 E. Sanborn Ave., Wednesday were found to be human blood.

Stephanie Lyng

Police said Mrs. Lyng, daughter of columnist Dorsey Connors and mother of four, last was seen shortly before 10 a.m. Oct. 25 leaving a neighbor's house to return home for an appointment with a carpet installer. Police suspect foul play in her disappearance.

"NOW THE NEXT STEP is to see if the blood matches up with Mrs. Lyng's blood type," Palatine Det. Robert Ward said. "We don't know when county investigators, who are examining the samples, will have the results."

"We have no idea yet what happened to her," Ward said. "She might be walking around somewhere dazed for all we know."

Mrs. Lyng's 1975 blue stationwagon was found parked at the airport last Friday. Her 15-year-old daughter had reported her missing Wednesday, police said.

Ward said since then police have been conducting a statewide search for the woman.

"We're checking all the airlines to see if she boarded one last week," Ward said. "But besides that, we've touched on almost every base.

"WE'VE TALKED to relatives, sent out missing persons reports to police departments statewide and even have gone through car rental records to see if any cars had been registered in her name," he said.

Ward said investigators now are waiting to talk to her husband, Edward Lyng, 45, who is recuperating from kidney surgery Thursday at Sherman Hospital, Elgin. Police said he was admitted to the hospital the day after his wife disappeared.

Lyng, head of the Lyng Canteen Service Co., Elgin, said Wednesday his wife had filed a divorce suit against him charging mental cruelty. He said divorce proceedings were in a preliminary state.

"We've gotten reports from Mrs. Lyng's family and neighbors that she was not one just to get up and run away," Ward said. "One of her neighbors called her a lady's lady."

One business associate said Mrs. Lyng, an employe of Arlington Realty in Palatine, was so cautious at work that she usually refused to join men for business lunches.

"SHE SEEMED TO be devoted to her four children," Ward said. "It's definitely a strange case."

A neighbor of the Lyng family said the Lyngs appeared financially secure becauee they recently had completed an addition to their two-story house.

Mrs. Lyng's four children, ranging in age from 8 to 15, are living with an aunt at the Lyng's Palatine home, police said. The aunt, who refused to give her name except to say she is Edward Lyng's sister, said:

"All we know is what we've read in the papers and what police have told us," she said. "We haven't gotten any calls or anything."

Call for arms embargo blasted by S. Africans

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South Africa's pro-government newspaper The Citizen Thursday said the United States could "go to hell" for President Carter's call for an arms embargo against the white supremacist regime.

The government reported a growing exodus of whites from South Africa and police killed a black "terrorist" it said was trained in Angola and blew up a cache of Soviet-made arms in a raid on a farming village.

In its editorial, the English language daily said:

"We cannot be bullied, bashed and browbeaten, threatened and subjected to mandatory arms sanctions without saying: We have taken enough from you, do your worst, we shall not surrender to your demands."

"So we tell the United States to go to hell. Which is fair enough."

THE CITIZEN editorial said South Africa had friends in the United States but added, "We must stop making tactical blunders."

"Above all we must put together a package of changes which will impress not just our friends in America, but also those in Europe and elsewhere, that we are on the road to solving our problems," it said.

The editorial was in response to Carter's announcement last week that the United States would support a mandatory arms ban on South Africa.

The U.N. Security Council reached agreement on an arms embargo Wednesday night after a day of closed-door negotiations and U.N. sources said it would likely be approved Friday.

AN ARMS ENBARGO on military equipment was imposed by the United States on South Africa in 1962. The new embargo, which was an American response to a South African crackdown against black and white opponents to its Apartheid racial policies, will include hunting rifles, spare parts for aircraft and other items not included in the 1962 ban.

The South African Dept. of Immigration released figures Thursday showing a net loss of 145 persons during the month of August in a growing exodus of whites from the country. In August 1976 there was a net gain of 2,207 persons.

Mexican-U.S. bond 'model' for world

JUAREZ, Mexico (UPI) — First Lady Rosalynn Carter, stressing U.S. interest in Latin America, Thursday said improved relations between Mexico and the United States should serve as a "model for all countries."

Mrs. Carter and the first lady of Mexico, Carmen Romano de Lopez Portillo, participated in a daylong series of events on both sides of the muddy Rio Grande to mark the 10th anniversary of the settlement of a bitter century-long border dispute.

Mrs. Carter said the agreement "represents the settlement of a dispute beteen neighbors that was solved by intelligence, good will and friendship."

SPEAKING AT MEXICO'S Chamizal national memorial, Mrs. Carter told a large crowd, "It is an idea that could serve as a model for all countries who strive to solve problems and fulfill dreams through a process that calls for a blending of mutual respect."

Mrs. Carter said the pact represented "the promise of the future" in that it stressed sharing beteen the two nations which eventually divided the disputed land.

A White House statement issued reporters accompanying Mrs. Carter said the act showed "the importance the new U.S. administration attaches to our relationship with our closest Latin American neighbor."

MEXICO'S FIRST lady, speaking under a sunny sky with temperatures in the 60s, hailed President Carter's attitude toward Latin America and said the border was "not a dividing line, but a region in which two life styles. . . are interrelated without losing their respective identities."

The two women met on a bridge connecting Juarez and El Pasoo Texas, before beginning their public appearances on both sides of the border.

The Chamizal memorial originally was a part of Mexico, but the river bed shifted more than 100 years ago, causing a prolonged feud over which nation owned the land.

President Kennedy ordered the U.S. government to try and resolve the issue, something accomplished in 1967 under President Johnson.

Mrs. Carter was enthusiastically received by a group including Mexican school children carrying posters with the faces of the two first ladies.

Mrs. Carter is making a two-day trip which concludes today in New Orleans with an address before the National Assn. for the Mentally Retarded.

I'm not treated fairly, Patty says

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst says she is not getting fair treatment from the judicial system, and her attorney Thursday warned she will be in danger if she is returned to prison.

Miss Hearst, 23, whose appeal of her armed bank robbery conviction was turned down by an appellate court Wednesday, said:

"Everything that occurred in 1974 was the result of my being kidnaped. Justice demands recognition of that fact. I am extremely disappointed that the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was incapable of rendering a truly just decision."

ON WEDNESDAY, the circuit court rejected her argument that she did not receive a fair trial and affirmed her conviction on charges she participated in the robbery of a San Francisco bank branch in April 1974, 10 weeks after she was kidnaped by the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army.

Her attorney, Albert Johnson, said the newspaper heiress would ask the circuit court for a rehearing of her appeal within the 14-day deadline. If the rehearing is not granted, Johnson said she would appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Johnson also told reporters: "There is no prison in the country in which she could be housed safely because of her well-known cooperation with authorities."

U.S. Atty. James Browning Jr. said the government will make no attempt to have her $1.2 million bail revoked until the appeals process is completed. She has been free on bail for the past year.

JOHNSON SAID the circuit court was wrong in ignoring rulings by trial Judge Oliver J. Carter, who he said ruled twice during her preliminary hearing that she could testlfy about the robbery without later facing questioning about subsequent events while she still was underground with the SLA.

"This matter is pivotal on whether Miss Hearst received a fair trial," Johnson said. "It influenced her decision to testify. She took the stand only on the reliance of the ruling by the judge."

The appellate court rejected Miss Hearst's contention she was denied a fair trial because she was cross-examined by the prosecution about later events, during which she took the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination 42 times.

She had contended she was forced to participate in the bank robbery after being held in a closet under duress and torture by the SLA.

Social Security tax vote today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bill to raise Social Security taxes for 100 million workers — and increase them even more for employers — got by two big hurdles in the Senate Thursday.

By a 54-36 vote, the Senate killed a proposal by Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., to send the bill bac kto the Senate Finance Committee for further study until February.

Later, the threat of a filibuster was removed.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and several others had threatened to "talk at length" unless they were allowed to bring up for debate an amendment they are supporting.

The amendment, caught up in a dispute over compliance with Congress' budget process, would allow persons 65 and older, beginning in 1982, to earn unlimited wages and still collect full Social Security benefits. They now begin to lose benefits after earning $3,000.

BUT THE SENATE agreed by voice vote to allow this and several other amendments to come up for debate and a vote today, and Dole said that made the filibuster unnecessary.

Earlier, the Senate voted in favor of raising Social Security taxes more steeply for employers than employes. It rejected 49-41 a substitute by Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., which would tax them equally as would a House-passed bill.

But that matter was not finally settled, because Curtis said he probably would press on Friday another substitute, which also would tax employers and employes equally but through a different formula. Curtis believes the second version will get more votes.

Bellmon complained the bill was sent to the Senate floor with insufficient time for deliberation. He said no one would suffer by delaying until February because the bill's provisions would not begin until October 1979.

"The American people can only take so much," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M. He said the bill's $72 billion in Social Security tax increases over the first five years, atop $40 billion to $60 billion in energy taxes on which Congress is working would produce "a taxpayers' revolt."

Food service checked for fraud

by TONI GINNETTI

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott's consumer fraud division has begun an investigation into a Des Plaines food buying service that purports to save money for its customers.

Scott's office has initiated the investigation into Great Lakes Foods Inc., 1517 Ellinwood St., following an Oct. 24 story in The Daily Herald describing the company's operation and complaints from customers of the firm.

Donald G. Mulack, head of Scott's consumer fraud and protection division, Thursday said his office is investigating the firm to determine if it is violating state law prohibiting chain referral sales.

Such sales involve customers getting a bonus from a firm if they solicit new customers.

Mulack said if the firm is found to be violating the law, his division will seek court action against the company.

GREAT LAKES operates by contracting with customers to sell meat and other food items at costs the customers are told will be less than retail store prices.

Customers said, however, they found the prices they paid were higher than retail in some cases and that food quantities were reduced by the firm after initial deliveries.

The customers also said they were referred to the service by friends already buying from the company. Those who recommended the firm to others received $15 credits for each referral, customers said.

RECORDS ON FILE with the Illinois Secretary of State's corporation division list the company's office at 7318 W. North Ave., Elmwood Park. The company president is listed as Orante C. Roncone and secretary as Richard Henamen.

The same Elmwood Park address also is given for a firm known as Joyce Acceptance Corp., The Daily Herald learned. The company, whose president is listed as Angelo Caprini and secretary as Joyce Caprini, apparently is a sister firm that becomes involved in securing payment from Great Lakes customers.

Mulack said such operations typically involve a sister firm buying the customer's contract from the food service. The sister firm than pursues collecting money from customers, but if customers have complaints about the food service, the sister firm takes no responsibility and refers the customers back to the original firm.

Mulack said his office also is attempting to determine if the principles in Great Lakes are connected to another similar food buying service, now bankrupt, that has come under scrutiny by the sonsumer fraud division.

Murdered woman a Chicago resident

Police Thursday released the identity of a murdered woman found in a sleeping bag Wednesday on Old Orchard Road in Skokie.

Police used fingerprints to identify the body as Martha E. Kowalski, 31, of 7440 N. Hermitage, Chicago. She was last seen Oct. 25 by her boyfriend. The boyfriend filed a missing persons complaint on the woman two days later.

Skokie Police Sgt. Michael Burns said Thursday the woman had been arrested in Chicago Aug. 30 for prostitution. Police records also show Ms. Kowalski was unemployed at the time of her death.

"We're waiting right now for a report from the medical examiner's office," Burns said. "As far as we can tell, there were no signs of violence on the body to indicate the cause of death."

Coed murder trial testimony begins

Testimony began Thurslay in the trial of Ronald Gene Molter, 19, a factory worker and former student accused of beating and strangling a Mount Prospect coed. Molter, of Monroe, Mich., is accused of killing Marilyn Goodman, 18, Mount Prospect, last May. Both were students at the Northwood Institute in Midland until Molter was suspended for "campus violations" last February. Miss Goodman's partially clad body was found in a wooded area near the campus May 10. Molter was arrested at his home May 26, after witnesses told police that on May 7 he left a party with Miss Goodman after she admired his new car.

Macek gets 200 years in murder

Richard Macek, a convicted murderer who left bite marks on a victim, pleaded guilty Thursday to the murder of a Crystal Lake woman and was sentenced to 200 to 400 years in prison. Macek, 30, admitted in McHenry County Circuit Court he killed Nancy Lossman, 26, at her apartment Sept. 9, 1974. Macek was named in a two-count indictment Nov. 19, 1976, for the murders of Mrs. Lossman and her 3-year-old daughter, Lisa. In a negotiated plea, the state withdrew the indictment for the daughter's murder.

Authorities responding to a fire at the Lossman apartment found Mrs. Lossman lying on the floor, strangled with a green nylon cord. Her daughter's body was found with her head pushed down the toilet, strangled with a brassiere. Macek will serve the sentence concurrently with a 50-to 75-year sentence in McHenry County for the 1975 attempted murder of Mrs. Sharon Kulisek of Woodstock.

Macek will be returned to Wisconsin Friday, where he is serving a life sentence for the 1974 rape-murder of a maid. He also is serving an indefinite sentence in Central State Hospital in Waupon, Wis., for the rape-slashing of a Wauwatosa, Wis., woman. He is also a suspect in the 1972 murder of Sally Kandel, 14, Carol Stream.

12 truck firms charged in payments

The Interstate Commerce Commission charged in a federal suit Thursday that 12 large midwestern trucking companies illegally retained $2.3 million in inadvertent double payments from shippers. "The result," said an ICC official, "is the bilking of the American consumer of millions of dollars. Transportation costs do not come to rest with the shipper. They are passed on to the public as a portion of the cost of goods or services." Suits were filed simultaneously in Chicago, Milwaukee and Indianapolis, the ICC said. The shippers, according to the ICC, unwittingly paid their transportation bills twice. The money was kept by the trucking companies, however, with no efforts made to refund it, the ICC charged.

In Chicago, actions were filed against Long Transportation of Detroit for allegedly keeping $150,000, Sturm Freightways of Peoria for allegedly retaining $60,000, Liberty Trucking of Chicago for allegedly retaining $20,000, D. K. Motor Service of Summit for allegedly retaining $20,000, Freeport Fast Freight of Chicago for allegedly retaining $132,000 and Sims Motor Transportation Lines of Chicago for allegedly retaining $29,000.

O'Hare concession audit ordered

Mayor Michael A. Bilandic Thursday said he has retained an accounting firm to audit the city's controversial contract with a concessionaire at O'Hare International Airport. Bilandic said the accounting firm of Arthur Anderson & Co. will audit the city's contract with the Airline Canteen Service Corp., a multimillion dollar operation selling newspapers and notions at the airport. It was disclosed in newspaper reports this week that two friends and former law partners of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley once were part owners of the firm that has held the airport concession since 1962.

Surveys have shown that income generated from the O'Hare concessions falls far short of revenue collected by cities with smaller airports. Bilandic also directed the city corporation counsel to review the contract — in which the city receives 12 to 15 per cent of sales — to investigate possible violations of the agreement. "If termination of the lease with Airline Canteen is te appropriate acton, I will not hesitate to take that action," Bilandic said.

Sexual assault case starts with closed deliberations

More than one hour of closed deliberations Thursday opened a hearing to determine if a former Arlington Heights man on probation for sexually assaulting a 16-year-old youth should be sentenced to jail.

David J. Welch, 26, is facing revocation of probation following his arrest in May by Chicago police for contributing to the delinquency of his 14-year-old foster son.

Welch was put on five years' probation Dec. 5, 1975, by Judge Richard L. Curry of Cook County Circuit Court after he pleaded guilty to charges of deviate sexual assault against an Arlington Heights youth.

WELCH WAS CHARGED in May in connection with a crackdown on child pornography in Chicago. He was arrested after an undercover agent purchased a pornographic film in which Welch's foster son allegedly appeared.

During proceedings Thursday, Assistant State's Attorneys Terry Chiganos and Jay Magnuson deliberated with Assistant Public Defender Frank Rago in Curry's chambers for more than an hour.

The proceedings were continued to Nov. 17 for final pretrial arguments. The violation-of-probation proceedings are scheduled for Dec. 15.

Welch has been free pending trial on the Chicago police charge, which carries only a misdemeanor penalty. However, if Welch is found to have violated his probation, he faces a sentence of from four years to life imprisonment.

Terms of Welch's probation had included a stipulation that he report periodically for psychiatric counseling, according to records. However, Welch has failed to do so and prosecutors Thursday asked Curry to consider that in the probation violation petition.

Welch is scheduled to appear in circuit court in Chicago Nov. 16 on the pending pornography charge.

Officials asked to reconsider golf clubhouse size

by BILL HILL

A group of angry taxpayers, supported by representatives of nine homeowners associations, have asked Arlington Heights Park District officials to reconsider plans to build a $576,000 golf course clubhouse.

It is unlikely the request will be granted, Park Board Pres. Jacqueline Grunewald said Thursday, because construction contracts for the clubhouse at the golf course under construction at Wilke and Central roads were awarded last week.

"It wouldn't be legally responsible to open ourselves to new hearings. We have a legal responsibility to the architectural firm we employed for this and we've given our word to them," Mrs. Grunewald said.

"DEMOCRATICALLY speaking, we had three open meetings on this and we let everyone speak. I don't think there's a necessity for another hearing," she said.

The park board voted 3 to 2 to build the clubhouse, which will cost $521,000 to construct. Park officials say it will cost $55,000 for furnishings for the building, $10,360 to install parking lot lights and $5,000 to solve soil problems. An additional $10,000 has been set aside for contingencies.

During heated park board meerings last month, residents and members of two taxpayer groups asked park officials not to spend more than $300,000 on the clubhouse because that amount was budgeted for the building when a $1.5 million referendum for the golf course was approved by voters in October 1976.

The latest golf course construction budget estimates the total project will cost $1,871,396 with the sale of bonds and interest providing $1,630,918. Park officials plan to finance the difference through a construction loan.

"We know they're legally within their rights (to exceed the $1.5 million referendum figure), but what they've done is a moral issue," said Pat Carbery, 1026 S. Chestnut Ave., a vocal critic of the clubhouse.

"ALL WE'VE ASKED them to do is to stay within the $300,000 they requested for a clubhouse in the referendum. We're not against a clubhouse per se. We want a nice-looking facility built out there. What we're saying is that we think they should do it for $300,000," Mrs. Carbery said.

The request for another meeting on the clubhouse subject was made by Robert M. Klepak, an attorney, at the request of about 15 Arlington Heights residents, Mrs. Carbery said.

Four homeowner associations in the village have voted to support the request and five other groups have had representatives at the park board meetings opposing the clubhouse plans, he said.

"The citizens believe that if in fact there is proper authority for the incurring of this additional debt beyond the referendum amount that the trustees should consider the possible appearance of a breach of trust with the voters that could arise by asking the voters for $1.5 million and then, even with authority, spending an additional $375,000," Klepak's letter to park officials states.

THE GOLF COURSE budget before the referendum only called for a $500,000 clubhouse because no decisions had been made on what facilities the building should have, park officials say.

Once an architect was hired and told what to include in the building, a cost estimate of $450,000 was announced. Escalating construction costs were blamed for the higher bid figures.

The two-story clubhouse will have a pro shop, a children's nursery, a manager's room, locker rooms and areas for storing carts and equipment on the main level. Plans for the upper level include a snack bar, a dining area, a kitchen and an apartment for either the golf course superintendent or manager.

Much of the controversy resulted from plans for a dining area, which park officials say is needed to handle overflow from the snack bar and for banquets.

Opponents of the clubhouse insisted park officials could not guarantee that the dining facilities will produce extra revenue for the park district and said it should be deleted from the plans.

20 appear before committee

Parents fight for local schools

Keep the neighborhood schools open was the message parents gave to a citizens committee studying the need for school closings in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Many of the 20 residents who attended a meeting of the committee Thursday night said they are not convinced that a school has to be closed.

District officials have warned that enrollment has dropped 29.1 per cent in the past six years and is likely to fall another 32.5 per cent in the next decade.

"TO ME, IT'S not a cardinal sin to see seven or eight rooms in a school empty if my children are getting a proper education," said Carl Kowalski of Des Plaines.

He told the committee he moved here because it meant his children would have a short walk to school and could eat lunch at home with their mother.

If the school were closed and his children required to get up earlier, ride a bus and stay at school for lunch, he would be "very upset," he said.

Parents told the committee they would be convinced of the merit of school closings only if some educational as well as financial benefit could be shown.

Des Plaines resident Lou Herzog questioned how the district got into the position it is in.

"IF WE CAN look 10 years down the road now, why couldn't we have looked 10 years down the road in 1966-67?" he asked. "Did we overreact: Did we overbuild?"

Committee member Charles Stansky, who served on the Dist. 59 Board in the late 1960s, assured Herzog that district officials thought they had the enrollment projections to justify the continued building of schools.

"Our projected population for this year and next was supposed to be 15,000 students, but we have only about 9,000," he said.

Changing times are responsible for much of the error in the earlier enrollment projection, Stansky said. Ten years ago, people were having larger families, homes were less expensive and attracted families with young children and fewer persons remained in their homes after their children left, he said.

SEVERAL RESIDENTS questioned how much more accurate current enrollment projections will prove to be as the times continue to change.

District Business Mgr. Arthur Perry assured them that it will be at least five years before the enrollment starts increasing again and that it will be 15 to 20 years before the enrollment is back up to its peak of 11,500 students.

Appointed by the board in July, the citizens committee has until January to recommend which schools, if any, should be closed to meet the district's declining enrollment problem.

Panel formed to monitor backstretch conditions and 24 which prompted the village's planned actions described in part how families with children were allowed to live in dormitory rooms on the backstretch, in violation of village housing codes and an agreement between the track and the village that children would not be allowed to live in the dorms.

Joyce, in his first public comment on the matter, this week denied that backstretch housing is substandard but said the track had "an enforcement problem" this summer in keeping children off the backstretch.

"THE HOUSING IS not substandard and is specifically designed for single and double occupancy and no more," Joyce said in a letter to the village released by Hanson. "Each room is posted setting forth maximum occupancy. Each person is assigned a room and is assigned specifically to that room for their use and no one else.

"We do have an enforcement problem with children being snuck into the backstretch as the (racing) meet progresses," Joyce's letter added. "That problem is complicated by tenant privacy and the difficulty of identifying during the daytime whether children come from the trailer park, are accompanying parents living off the premises, or are illegally housed in the dormitories.

"The answer of course, is better enforcement which we have committed ourselves to do," he added.

JOYCE SAID children are only allowed to live in the trailer park area of the backstretch.

His letter also said crime on the backstretch in 1977 was "cut in half" compared with 1976. The reported crime decline was noted in the series, although police could not supply statistics to illustrate the statement.

Joyce also said the race track was "ahead of schedule on (meeting) requirements of our (1974) agreement with the village," that "all buildings on the backstretch are either noncombustible or completely sprinkled," which the series also noted and that the race track "has spent $4 million on the backstretch in the last few years despite a negative cash flow position."

He said track records show only 943 persons resided on the backstretch this summer rather than nearly 2,000 reported in the series.

THE LETTER ALSO said "there is a complete identification system in effect" on the backstretch, although the series told how the required registration of personnel was ignored this year because track officials said workers "resented" wearing both a track and Illinois Racing Board identification.

"Arlington Park has the finest backstretch program in the Midwest," Joyce's letter said. "Responsible authorities have indicated we are doing a good job on the backstretch."

Arlington Park Race Track in the past six years earned a total of only $817,000, according to figures supplied by Joyce. During the same period its sister track, Washington Park Race Track in Homewood, lost about $3 million, his figures indicate.

Washington Park was destroyed by fire in February. Its harness racing dates currently are being run at Arlington Park.

Village joins Wheelers in fight over leaf pickup

Arlington Heights officials have joined Donald and Elaine Wheeler in a dispute with the Laseke Disposal Co. over whether trash bags left on the parkway should be picked up by the garbagemen.

The Wheelers' 22 bags of leaves have been sitting on their parkway, about two feet from the curb on Salem Avenue, since early Tuesday morning. They still were sitting there Thursday night because Laseke officials insist they must be stacked along the curb.

Village officials say garbagemen should have picked up the leaves Tuesday morning during the regular pickup in the Wheelers' area, and ordered Laseke officials to pick up the bags of leaves Thursday.

"MR. LASEKE'S decision was that leaves left on the parkway do not constitute curb pickup," George Winand, village health director, said Thursday.

"I disagree with him and the village manager will contact Mr. Laseke Friday to advise him of our interpretation of the contract," Weinand said.

"We've always held that if it's in the parkway between the street and the sidewalk, it should be picked up," he said.

Public works crews will pick up the Wheelers' leaves, as Laseke won't, Weinand said.

The village's contract with the Laseke Disposal Co. states: "Regular residential service also includes brush or branches securely tied in five-foot bundles, weighing not more than 50 pounds each, and leaves, grass, shrubbery clippings, or similar garden waste in disposal containers weighing not more than 50 pounds placed at the curb."

The village's five-year contract giving the Laseke firm exclusive rights to garbage service in Arlington Heights expires next year.

A Message From GEORGE HARRIS Your Pharmacist

IT'S TIME FOR ANOTHER MIRACLE
It's time to find a cure for diabetes. Millions have diabetes and learn to live with it. Even more millions have it and do not know it. It is one of the major killers and disablers in our society.

THE SEARCH GOES ON
While it does, it is urgent that all possible be done to discover those "unknown diabetics" before serious consequences associated with the disease start to appear. Although it is incurable it can be lived with if diagnosis is early and medical advice is followed.

WHAT SHOULD YOU LOOK FOR?
Sometimes there are absolutely no symptoms of diabetes at all. That is why the most important step is to regularly have your physician test for it. A simple blood test can determine if there is a problem. When there are symptoms they might be excessive thirst and urination, huge appetite, but with a gain in weight and weakness, tiring and fatigue.

WHO IS MOST LIKELY TO GET DIABETES?
Heredity is considered an important factor. If someone in your family is or was a diabetic, you should be especially watchful. A good overall summary would be family history, over forty, overweight and female.

WE ARE A DIABETIC CENTER
We carry a full line of diabetic needs and our personnel are trained to help diabetics shop and to answer their questions. Hopefully, that miracle will come along soon, but until then we'll be here to help all we can.

THE CASKET BEARING the body of Joseph Zerilli is borne from Holy Family Catholic Church in Detroit Thursday as the reputed Detroit Mafia "godfather" was laid to rest. Law enforcement officials reportedly believe that Zerilli's son, Anthony, is now the most powerful single man in the Detroit Mafia organization, succeeding his father. Zerilli, 79, died Oct. 30 and was believed to be the last of the Prohibition Era's gang war veterans and reputedly a member of the Mafia's National Ruling Council.

Carter receives neutron bomb OK

Congress Thursday gave President Carter authorization to go ahead with development of the neutron bomb and the cruise missile. The Senate passed a $476.4 million supplemental defense authorization bill and a $2.6 billion military energy authorization measure which also include provisions for experimenting with a successor to the B-1 bomber. The House passed the two bills Wednesday, but Congress must still appropriate the funds for the programs in a supplemental money bill now in conference. After protracted and stormy passage through the committee stages when both the neutron bomb and the future of the B-1 roused angry controversy, the bills got final congressional approval with minimum debate and by voice vote in the Senate.

Chowchilla kids in good spirits

A doctor testified Thursday that 26 children who were kidnapped and imprisoned in a buried moving van for 16 hours were in good spirits after their rescue, with only a few minor cuts and bruises. Dr. Howard Wax said, under cross examination, that "in general, they were in excellent spirits, with some of the children having minor injuries." Wax was a witness in the trial of Frederick Woods, 26, James Schoenfeld, 26, and Richard Schoenfeld, 23, on charges of kidnapping with bodily injury to the children and their bus driver. The three earlier pleaded guilty to the bizarre kidnapping in which the children, seized in their school bus on a highway near Chowchilla, Calif., in August 1976, were to be held for $5 million ransom. The trial before Superior Court Judge Leo Deegan without a jury will determine whether bodily injury was involved. If so, the defendants could get much stiffer prison terms.

Accord reached on WASP benefits

The House Thursday agreed with the Senate that some 800 surviving women pilots from World War II — the WASPS — should receive veterans benefits. The provision approved without debate and by voice vote culminated a 34-year fight by members of the Women Airforce Service Pilots to win veteran status. A bipartisan effort by most of the 18 women members of the House, led by Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., resulted in House acceptance of the Senate provision which was attached to an earlier House-passed measure raising G.I. education allowance rates by 6.6 per cent. The bill was returned to the Senate for final congressional approval.

Jury pondering Bolles case

The jury in the Don Bolles murder trial deliberated for a third day Thursday with no indication that it was near a verdict. The jurors have testimony from 87 witnesses plus 174 exhibits to consider in deciding the case against contractor Max Dunlap and plumber James Robison. They heard testimony read back for about 20 minutes at a closed session Wednesday afternoon. The testimony that was repeated was not disclosed.

Israeli strikes, protests continue

Tens of thousands of Israeli workers again Thurday staged strikes and protest marches against the government's new economic policies. But Prime Minister Menahem Begin said he would not be swayed by the "Bolshevik-like tones" of workers who shut down banks, factories and train service to demand immediate compensation for the increased cost of living. "The government policy steals bread from the mouths of our children," said one sign at a rally by more than 25,000 demonstrators at Tel Aviv's City Hall Square.

Stick-wielding police and guards waylaid several thousand protesters who broke official cordons to march on Begin's office. The protests were organized by the Histadrut labor federation in a turnabout from its cooperation with unpopular moves by previous Labor Party administrations.

Somalia appeals to Carter, West

Somalia has appealed to President Carter and the leaders of Western Europe to help contain the Soviet Union's massive assistance to Ethiopia, diplomatic sources said Thursday. Addis Ababa is battling Somali rebels for control of four provinces in southeast Ethiopia. The sources said Somali President Siad Barre called in the ambassadors of the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Italy last week and gave them a special message to deliver to their governments. The message handed to each ambassador was believed to be essentially the same — an appeal for concerted Wesetrn action to contain Soviet aid to Ethiopia.

Laetrile, abortion vetoes killed

guage the unborn can live with."

Hyde said allowing abortions in cases of rape and incest "invites massive fraud," and he called the Senate's health language "a giant loophole."

Because of the House vote, Congress must work out another temporary method of funding the Labor Dept. and the Dept. of Health Education and Welfare, whose fiscal 1978 appropriations are tied to the abortion legislation.

THE HOUSE quickly passed by voice vote a resolution that would continue funding the two big agencies as well as the District of Columbia through November to ensure payrolls would be met and programs continued while the abortion issue remains unresolved.

Thompson in his veto message had predicted the abortion payment ban would force poor women to seek "back alley butchers."

State Rep. Gerald Bradley, D-Bloomington, rejected that charge.

The override on the Laetrile came as a surprise to Totten and aides to Thompson who were under the impression that the 107 votes needed for override were not available.

In arguing for the Laetrile override Totten said, "In a country founded on personal freedom, it is difficult to understand how cancer patients are forced to become cancer criminals.

"Freedom of choice is one of the blessings we have as citizens of the United States. We should not deny it to anyone, especially cancer patients in their hour of greatest need," he said.

WHILE THE BILL passed by wide margins last spring, support seemed to waver in the wake of reports that the substance, which is a derivative of apricot pits, was toxic.

Totten denied that charge and argued the legislation contains enough safeguards to prevent abuse.

However State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, who disclosed during earlier Laetrile debates that she had been a cancer patient, said cancer patients will not benefit from the bill.

"Freedom of choice is too easy a way to define this issue. Only thieves and charlatans stand to gain from the passage of this bill," she said.

"Cancer patients need help and not false hope."

Several lawmakers argued for passage of the bill while noting that there is little hard evidence to suggest Laetrile actually cures cancer.

Kissinger knocks U.S. Mideast policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry Kissinger, voicing strong disagreement with administration Mideast policy, said Thursday a Palestinian state on the west bank of the Jordan "cannot be compatible with the tranquility of the Middle East."

He told Jewish leaders, who have strongly criticized President Carter for what they regard as a pro-Arab policy, that a true Middle East peace can be achieved only by the closest cooperation between the United States and Israel.

Kissinger also said foreign policy "must be based on a concern for the balance of power and on security."

"It is why, when I was in office, whatever the difficulties, we saw to it that there was massive supply of military equipment to Israel," the former secretary said.

In an address to the World Jewish Congress, Kissinger said: "The United States can afford certain experiments because if we are wrong, our worst penalty is to redouble our efforts. For Israel, certain experiments cannot be tried, because Israeli leaders get only one guess," he said. "If they are wrong, it may involve the survial of their people."

Sturgis professes only aid for CIA 'friend,' Lorenz

NEW YORK (UPI) — Watergate burglar Frank Sturgis said Thursday he was trying to help not hurt, a former CIA informant who says Sturgis shot at President Kennedy the day of his assassination in Dallas.

Marita Lorenz, Cuban premier Fidel Castro's onetime lover, had Sturgis arrested Monday night on harassment charges as he entered her luxury East Side apartment.

Sturgis, who was security head of Castro's Air Force, won release from jail Wednesday night on $10,000 bail raised by friends, but said he bore no malice to his "friend," Miss Lornz.

"I HAVE TRIED to help this young lady who I have known for a long time," he said at a news conference arranged by his lawyer.

"There are elements behind her that have pressed her to do what she had done. It's something I'd like to find out myself."

Miss Lorenz reportedly has talked to the House Committee on Investigation about Sturgis' alleged link to the Kennedy assassination and her own role in a plot to kill Castro.

Sturgis said he first learned of her story from House Committee aide, Al Gonzalez, who allegedly asked him to check it out.

FRANK STURGIS

HE SAID he came to New York Monday, however, at Miss Lorenz' request — and with plane tickets she bought — to talk to her about her story. Police investigating Sturgis' arrest said they too had learned she purchased the tickets.

The convicted burglar said he went to her apartments after she told him she did not want to talk on the phone. There he found two city detectives waiting for him.

Sturgis also refuted Miss Lorenz' claim that they and Lee Harvey Oswald drove together to Dallas days before Kennedy's death and that Sturgis was a "second gun" in the assassination. He also said he never knew Oswald.

On the day of the assassination, Sturgis said he was in Miami at home with his family.

The convicted burglar said, however, that he had given information to the government about a conspiracy to assassinate Kennedy.

"I HAVE told all the assassination committee members. I have given some evidence to the committee which I believe leads to the conspiracy and people involved in the conspiracy to kill the president of the United States," he said. "Marita Lorenz was not involved."

Sturgis refused to verify newspaper reports that he had documents linking Castro to the Kennedy assassination and proving that Jack Ruby, who shot Oswald to death, was in Havana two months before the assassination.

U.N. appeals for end to air hijackings

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. General Assembly Thursday unanimously approved an appeal to all nations of the world to unite and end the threat of air hijackings, although some nations said the action was weak and ineffective.

International airline pilots who demanded the United Nations take up the air terrorism issue by threatening a worldwide strike, said they were satisfied and canceled their walkout plans.

The United States hailed the resolution as a "major step forward," but Israel said it was disappointing. Cuba complained the declaration revealed a discriminatory bias because the most recent notorious hijacking involved European tourists.

"THE U.N. HAS listened to the voice of the people," said Capt. Derry Pearce, president of the International Federation of Air Line Pilots Associations.

"IFALPA does not plan to take any (strike) action at this time," said W. A. Murphy, deputy president of the group. "Any nation that violates the spirit of the resolution will be held accountable by the rest of the world."

With none of the 149 U.N. member states dissenting, there was no roll-call vote on the anti-hijacking resolution. The declaration, sponsored by 50 nations including the United States and most Western powers, called for a global effort to increase participation in three international anti-hijacking treaties and tighten airport security.

It also called on the nations of the world "to take all necessary steps" to prevent terrorism and the use of innocent travelers as hostages, including tightening airport security and exchanging "relevant information" among states facing terrorist threats.

ISRAELI AMBASSADOR Chaim Herzog said the action was weak and a "compromise with the forces that back and finance acts of terror."

"It appears to me the international pilots' association has been taken for a ride," he said.

Capt. John J. O'Donnell, president of the U.S. Airline Pilots Assn., said his members "would like to have seen a stronger resolution, but at the same time are grateful for any action taken that has the real effect of deterring criminals from carrying out their evil acts of terrorism."

Cuba's Ambassador Ricardo Alarcon de Quesada said his nation did not share the feeling of consensus expressed in the anti-terrorist resolution, and he cautioned other states not to "confuse terrorism with legitimate revolutionary violence."

U.N. to vote arms ban against South Africa

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. Security Council will meet this morning to impose officially a mandatory arms embargo against South Africa — the first time it ever has voted sanctions against any U.N. member nation.

Diplomatic sources said the vote iwll be a unanimous 15-0.

The Council wound up consultations behind closed doors on the new resolution — a compromise between black African states and western powers — and set the Friday session for 10 a.m.

The arms embargo will include a ban on "cooperation with South Africa in the development of nuclear weapons" and a review on existing licensing contracts for arms manufacturing, sources said.

It is the first time in its history that the United Nations has taken such action against a member. It imposed economic sanctions against Rhodesia, but Rhodesia — considered legally still a British colony — does not belong to the U.N.

The arms embargo was worked out as a compromise after the United States, Britain and France Monday vetoed three hardline black Africa resolutions calling for economic sanctions as well as action banning arms shipments.

The compromise omits any reference to the economics issue.

The Western powers — the United States, Britain, France, Canada and West Germany — gave in on their demands for a time limitation of six months on an arms embargo. The compromise mentions no time element.

David lacks immunity to disease

Space suit lets boy walk in world

HOUSTON (UPI) — Doctors Thursday unveiled a "space suit" that has enabled David, an immunity deficient child, to hug his mother and walk outside his protective bubble for the first time in his six years of life.

The child — whose last name has been withheld since his birth in a sterile environment — lacks the natural organisms that protect most persons from minor infections and has never touched skin other than his own.

Until NASA and Texas Children's Hospital developed the $20,000 rubber, plastic and nylon suit with a bubble helmet, he had never left the protective cells at home, a van used to transport him to and from the hospital.

"HIS EYES were huge" the first time he tried the suit last July, said nurse Brynn Holcombe. "He didn't say anything. It was his expression. He kept looking at the gloves."

"He was looking around, hugging his family, because he had never really gotten to do that, and he said, 'Let's go take a walk.' "

NASA's Dr. Lon Bergman said the suit, paid for by taxpayers under the agency's "spinoff" development program, is more like quarrantine clothes worn by astronauts after return from space rather than like actual space suits.

HE SAID THE suit, which is attached to powered ventilating and other equipment on a seat-equipped cart David can ride, has multiple layers to protect against puncture.

DAVID SHARES HIS mother's joy at being held close in her arms. David is a 6-year-old who suffers from severe combined immune deficiency. He has been cared for since birth in a series of germ-proof isolators. Now a space suit-like mobile isolator system, designed by the NASA Johnson Space Center in Houston, will be used by David to broaden his environment and thereby enhance his educational experiences.

David's physician, Dr. Buford Nichols, said the suit was developed in order to facilitate David's continued development despite his handicap. He said it is unknown whether the boy ever will escape his protected environment.

"He's an intelligent child, but he doesn't have the cultural experience that we like him to have," Nichols said. "We can allow him to develop physical skills he can't develop in the present isolator. You saw how clumsy he was."

Nichols showed a film of David climbing into and trying the suit at the hospital. He has to climb through a tube leading from his bubble.

He smiled, shouted "I like it," played with toys, reached out for his family and associates.

DAVID HAS had interaction with others through gloves extending into his bubble, but has been limited as to movement and exploration of the outside world. There is talk of taking him to the zoo, for instance.

Officials said logistics and the requirement of support personnel make it unlikely the suit will be used more than once a week in the near future. But Nichols said that experience might be increased.

They said the suit, which will be tested at Los Angeles Children's Hospital soon, could have other uses for persons with temporary immunity problems, such as in cases of leukemia or other diseases.

Word change OKd in POW code

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Thursday approved a tiny but historic change in the Prisoner of War Code designed to acknowledge that POWs, under unbearable torture, may tell more than name, rank and service number without loss of honor.

A special review panel recommended the change as a result of the Vietnam War prison camp experience, where GIs said physical torture was commonly used to destroy morale and obtain antiwar propaganda statements.

"The reason for the change is to provide a more uniform understanding to POW's of their responsibility," the White House said in a statement. "And to reduce guilt feelings in prisoners who are coerced into giving more than name, rank, service number and date of birth."

THE ORDER SIGNED by Carter changes just two words in the Armed Forces Code of Conduct, the rigid no-talk honor code conceived after the "brainwashing" of Korean War POWs which began:

"When questioned, should I become a prisoner of war, I am bound only to give name, rank, service number and date of birth."

The amendment eliminates the words "bound only" and says, "When questioned, should I become a prisoner of war, I am required to give name, rank, service number and date of burth."

Officials said the slight semantic change is all that is needed to remove the previous moral prohibition against disclosing any other information.

As recommended by the review board, the rest of the code reads the same and makes clear a POW still is expected to endure all the torture he can before giving any further cooperation. It says:

"I will evade answering further questions to the utmost of my ability. I will make no oral or written statements disloyal to my country and its allies or harmful to their cause."

MANY OF THE 576 US. Vietnam War POWs who returned home in early 1973 reported they were beaten, locked arm and leg into stocks, deprived of food and medical treatment, and subjected to a brutality known as "the rope torture" in which the arms are bound so tightly behind the back that joints dislocate.

Many signed propaganda statements or made anti-war broadcasts for North Vietnam. Nearly all later repudiated these actions.

Carter also signed a second recommended change to POW regulations, this one designed to make clear that the ssnior ranking U.S. military man in a prison, except for doctors and chaplains, is commander of all lower-ranking U.S. prisoners regardless of which service they represent.

That order plugs a loophole in military regulations, which do not specifically state that prisoners belonging to one service must defy the orders of a senior POW from another service.

Chapman to study children's home

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — State Rep. Eugenia Chapman Thursday said she was named to a commission to determine whether a costly, but little used state children's home in Normal should be closed.

Chapman said she accepted an invitation from Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services Director Margaret Kennedy to serve on a 15-person commission to study the operations of the Soldiers and Sailors Children's School in Normal.

The new study comes after reports by The Daily Herald that the home spends nearly three times more per student than other similar private homes in the state, including Maryville Academy, Des Plaines.

KENNEDY SAID the committee will meet this month for the first time and that a final report is expected in January.

She recommended four possible proposals for the future of the school for the committee to consider.

Increasing attention has been focused on the 100-year-old institution, which has about 60 students, since reports that $33,000 is spent per child there.

Most other foster care facilities that receive state payments are given about $10,000 per child.

DCFS officials have offered conflicting explanations on why the per capita costs at the school are so much greater than other facilties. Some officials have suggested that the "most difficult" foster children in the state are sent there which results in increased costs. Others point to the upkeep of the 51 buildings, many of which are not utilized, as the reason.

STATE REP Pete Peters, R-Chicago, the GOP leader of the House appropriations committee, has called for the closing of the institution.

Peters said he plans to meet with Kennedy next week to discuss the formation of the committee.

"I haven't heard anything yet that will change my mind," he added.

Chapman, however, said she has an open mind on the issue of closing the school.

"Some serious questions have been raised by the legislature and the news media. The expenses might be justified. I am not prepared to criticize. I just want to ask questions," she said.

The committee will be headed by Harold Phelps, the former director of Illinois State University's department of special education.

Senate rejects mental aid veto

From our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — The Illinois Senate Thursday overwhelmingly rejected Gov. James R. Thompson's veto of legislation that would require the state to pay the full cost of assigning mentally handicapped patients to agencies like the Clearbrook Center in Rolling Meadows.

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, sponsor of the bill, said the Senate voted 57-1 to reject the governor's veto.

Thompson had opposed the bill because of its potential expense to the state. Local officials have noted that the cost of providing services for persons at Clearbrook exceed $300 while the state pays only $64.

Regner said he expects the veto to be rejected in the Illinois House later this month.

Regner noted that the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health and other social service agencies have begun to place increasing number of patients in local community agencies without paying the full costs.

The vote on Regner's bill was one of the first taken on the governor's vetos during the fall session.

Abortion changes OKd

The Illinois House agreed to accept changes in legislation sponsored by State Rep. Donald Deuster, R-Mundelein, which requires minor women to get either parental or court permission before obtaining an abortion.

Thompson's amendatory veto alters standards imposed on judges on whether the minors understand the consequences of their request. The bill also must be acted on in the Illinois Senate. If the changes are accepted in the upper chamber, the measure becomes law on Jan. 1.

Bill checks Medicaid

Legislative committees gave approval to several bills, including one sponsored by State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, aimed at giving the power to stop doing business with fraudulent Medicaid providers.

Chapman said her legislation, which was apporved by the Illinois House Human Resources Committee, will meet suggestions made by the Illinois Supreme Court that ruled the state could not terminate payments to firms convicted of fraudulent practices.

"The public wants us to halt welfare fraud and I think that while there must be concern about eligible recipients being taken off the rolls, we must also be concerned about the fraudulent providers.

The high court recently said the Illinois Dept. of Public Aid could not halt payments to convicted providers. A Senate committee approved a similar measure.

C&NW equipment buy finalized

The Regional Transportation Authority and the Chicago and North Western Ry. have come to terms over the RTA's purchase of the railroad's locomotives and coach cars.

Details of the purchase, released Thursday, are the result of months of negotiations. the talks began last December when the RTA and railroad agreed to a purchase of service agreement that set the equipment price at $20.7 million.

RTA board members have called a special board meeting Wednesday to consider the contract, saying the document is too complicated to be approved without a lawyer's explanation.

"I want my own lawyers to look this over," said board member Patrick O'Malley of Chicago. "I have never read a document that is so repetitious."

RTA attorney Jeremiah Marsh said the document is complicated because the railroad does not have clear title to all of its equipment. He said it will take the railroad about six months to pay off loans made against the equipment.

James Macdonald of the North Western said commuters will not find any difference in service as a result of the purchase. He said, however, it will give the RTA the "flexibility" to move equipment throughout the region as needed, unifying the system.

"Also, ultimately, I would expect the RTA will want to paint the cars and locomotives," he said.

RTA 5% gas tax may start Dec. 1

The Regional Transportation Authority's 5 per cent gasoline tax could begin as early as Dec. 1, now that RTA attorneys have decided not to wait for an Illinois Supreme Court ruling on the tax.

The tax, which will add an average of 2.3 cents per gallon to the pump price of gasoline, will begin as soon as the RTA has a mechanism for collecting it.

"I wouldn't see any need to wait for the court decision," RTA attorney Jeremiah Marsh said Thursday, explaining that the tax money could be held in escrow until the court upholds the tax.

MARSH SAID the RTA still does not have a way to collect the tax, although negotiations are progressing with the Ill. Dept. of Revenue.

"It is working out the mechanisms and details that is taking so much time," Marsh said. "You have to have forms and you have to have a way of getting the information out to retailers."

The RTA has been negotiating with the department of revenue since shortly after the gas tax was approved in June. The gas tax is designed to prevent a $55 million deficit in fiscal 1978, and every month the gas tax is delayed costs the RTA $6.8 million in potential revenue.

If the tax does not begin in December, the RTA will have to wait until Jan. 1 to start collecting the fuel tax.

"IT MUST START on the first day of the month after publication," Marsh said, noting that the RTA must publish a legal notice announcing the gas tax.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William A. Scott last week helped the gas tax on its way by ruling that the RTA could pay for the taxs' start-up costs, since there were no funds in the state's budget for that purpose.

These costs include as much as $400,000 for a computer model for collection of the tax, as well as the printing of forms and distribution of information.

Suburbs stall on MSD sewer rehab program

Some Northwest suburban communities are dragging their heels on a 4-year-old sanitary sewer rehabilitation program required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

No Northwest suburbs have complied with MSD guidelines, although several towns are nearing their compliance dates.

Rolling Meadows, for example, was to have completed its rehabilitation program by Oct. 31, creating a map of its sewer system, identifying problem areas and testing for illegal connections. But Rolling Meadows has not yet reported sufficient work on sewer flows and illegal connections, according to data released by the MSD Thursday night.

MOREOVER, the data show that all of the Northwest suburbs have been called down to the MSD to explain why they have not complied with target dates. Municipalities in other areas of the district have been taken to court over the program.

Ayoub Talhami of the MSD said the rehabilitation program is designed to cut down extraneous sewer flows, thus reducing the sewage treatment load. He said sewers traditionally have a low priority in municipal budgets because they only act up in emergencies.

"Nothing has been done for 25 years," Talhami said, noting that municipalities have been able to ignore their sewer systems since they were installed.

"Now we are catching up with everything we didn't do for 20 or 25 years."

PUBLIC WORKS directors from about two dozen suburbs met Thursday in Northbrook with MSD officials to compare problems and techniques encountered in the program.

Many public works directors expressed confusion over how to tackle the program, saying they did not understand how to use available federal funding.

Wheeling's Lawrence Oppenheimer, said he had neither the staff nor the money to do the testing required by a government grant application.

Oppenheimer said he tested flows in the village sewers, submitted the data and then was asked to redo the survey.

"I just threw up my hands and said forget it," Oppenheimer said. "I don't have the manpower to have my staff keep picking up manhole covers."

Wheeling, is one of few towns that have applied for government grants to help finance the sewer project. Mount Prospect and Hanover Park already have received funds to televise their sewer systesm, while Elk Grove Village, Palatine, Buffalo Grove and Wheeling have applied for funds.

FIREMEN IN New Castle, Pa. rescue woman from burning Holiday Inn early Thursday. Four persons died in the blaze and several were injured.

Fire in Holiday Inn kills 4, hurts 6 in Pennsylvania

NEW CASTLE, Pa. (UPI) — An early morning fire that quickly spread through a Holiday Inn Thursday killed four persons and injured six others.

The fire started in a first-floor laundry room in the rear of the motel, located on U.S. 422, three miles west of New Castle near the Ohio border.

No alarm went off when the fire broke out. A cleaning woman discovered the fire and alerted James Barile, a security guard, who ran from room to room knocking on doors to rout the 65 guests in the hotel's 59 rooms.

"THERE WERE flames coming out from the top of the door and then the door blew open," Barile said. "The fire caught in the ceiling and just took off."

A guest, Mike Lynch of Columbus, Ohio, said he heard an explosion, came out into the hall and saw Barile.

"If it wasn't for my curiosity and the explosion, I'd still be in there," Lynch said.

Three of the dead were identified as William Hudson, about 50, Pittsburgh; James P. Kerr, 53, Glenshaw, Pa.; and Matthew Verlich, 31, Pittsburgh. The other victim, also male, had not been identified.

Two of the injured were rushed in critical condition to Jameson Hospital in New Castle. One of them was a young woman, Lora Lee Hanna of Aliquippa, Pa., and the other was a Marine, Leroy Robinson, 22, of New Castle, who was transferred to a hospital in Youngstown, Ohio, suffering from multiple fractures and lacerations suffered when he jumped from the second floor.

Two firemen were treated and released for smoke inhalation.

Helms move spurred by security

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's decision on Richard Helms was based solely on national security concerns and had nothing to do with Helms' "fame and position," White House Press Sec. Jody Powell said Thursday.

Powell, discussing the case with reporters for more than an hour, said it was unfortunate the administration had to use the words "national security" to defend its decision, since many felt the term was employed in the Watergate era to hide abuses.

But Powell said Carter feared that if the former CIA director had gone to trial, secret information might have been revealed and that was the reason Helms was allowed to enter a "no contest" plea to a misdemeanor charge.

HELMS WAS ACCUSED of failing to testify accurately and completely before a Senate committee that questioned him in 1973 about CIA attempts three years earlier to undermine Marxist forces in Chile.

He is scheduled to be sentenced today by a federal judge.

A reporter reminded Powell Carter often said while running for President that, "We want to do away with a court system that if the average American family makes a mistake they go to prison, but if the big shot crook makes a mistake they go free. That's got to be changed."

Powell said, "I can assure you the relative degree of fame and position that this person (Helms) enjoyed was not a factor. The idea that this gentleman could wring favors out of this administration . . . there is no prima facie case" for that.

Court district change welcome

The Northwest suburbs will eventually become a single district in the Cook County Circuit Court system, and that's good news.

Court officials have announced a tentative redistricting plan which will put Barrington, Palatine, Wheeling, Hanover, Schaumburg and Elk Grove Townships and part of Maine Township into a newly designated Municipal Dist. 3 as mini-civic centers are built to serve this area and the North Shore.

The present court districts divide this area, with the court headquarters for the northern township in Skokie and for the southern townships headquartered in Niles.

That division has never made much sense, since it requires all area residents to drive fairly long distances to their central court facilities. Now that the county is actively building mini-civic centers — construction will begin on one in Skokie next spring — more convenient and contiguous court districts are even more necessary.

Court officials are looking for a site along Illinois Rte. 53 for this area's mini-civic center, on which construction will begin in about two years. That is a realistic idea, since Rte. 53 will provide access to the center from all parts of the area.

Two possible sites are being studied along Euclid Avenue at Rte. 53, near Arlington Park Race Track. One site, at Euclid and Wilke, is east of Rt. 53, while the other is just west of the expressway.

Either of those sites would be good for the area. And construction of the new center can hardly come soon enough.

The Cook County court system appears to be doing a realistic job in planning future service for the Northwest suburbs. We can hardly wait to see the plans become a reality.

Half solution to parking

Parking has long been a major obstacle to making the trek into Chicago to enjoy the theaters, restaurants, museums and sports events the city has to offer.

Now, Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic has proposed "permit only parking" that would all but close off sections of the city to suburbanites.

Under Bilandic's proposal street parking would be reserved for residents of congested neighborhoods and all others would have to fend for themselves.

It's not hard to identify with the frustration of Chicago residents who live in neighborhoods that attract many outsiders, such as Lincoln Park or the areas around Wrigley Field or Comiskey Park. They must find it next to impossible to park near their homes on many occasions.

However, simply banning outsiders from parking isn't a complete answer to the parking problem, because, while it may make life easier for residents, it will only further discourage visits to the city by suburbanites.

The truth is that Chicago needs to attract suburban visitors if its business community is to remain viable. "Fortress Chicago" will in the long run contribute to the city's doom.

Any ban on street parking by visitors must be accompanied by a plan to provide alternate parking for non-residents. This could include stringent requirements for new commercial and residential establishments to provide off-street parking, city garages or shuttle service from less congested areas.

We are glad to see city officials looking into the parking problem but we hope they remember us suburbanites who also like to be able to occasionally enjoy the city.

Truman pro-Israel stand had an ironic background

Jim Bishop

In the spring, Israel will be 30 years old. It was the British, in the Balfour Declaration, who promised the Jews "a homeland." It was Harry Truman, a sporadic anti-Semite, who made the promise come true.

The story is heavy with irony. In 1947, I organized the Christians for Zionism. With membership, it didn't amount to more than a gesture. I made speeches up and down the East Coast to B'nai B'rith groups. I stopped, because I asked myself. "Who has to convert Jews?"

The British Labor government of Clement Attlee reneged on its pledge because it feared to antagonize the Arab oil states. When Hitler was crushed, Truman urged Britain to admit 100,000 immigrant Jews to Palestine. The British asked for two years to "study the question."

THE PRESIDENT was caught in a vise. He felt a sense of shame that over five million Jews had been slaughtered in Europe. He was enraged that American Jews were trying to push him into an endorsement of Israel.

At a Cabinet meeting he shouted, "Jesus Christ couldn't please them when he was here on earth, so how could anyone expect that I would have any luck?" A moment later, when James V. Forrestal reminded him that the U.S. would need oil from Saudi Arabia, Truman snapped that he would not handle the problem from a standpoint of need, but from justice.

Gallant Jews were dying in the Holy Land, fighting for a small piece of real estate. Arabs died. Many were dispossessed from their homes and farms. In time, 900,000 of them were shoved into an arid land between the Mount of Temptation and the Jordan.

At times, Truman was brutally practical. When someone mentioned the Arab exiles, the president said, "I do not have hundreds of thousands of Arabs among my constituents." As Robert J. Donovan explains in his fine book, "Conflict and Crisis: The Presidency of Harry S. Truman," the British retreated from their pledge, and tried to put the Jewish question before the United Nations.

THE RUSSIANS were crying for an "Arab-Jewish state" — a contradiction in terms. The United Nations recommended that Palestine be partitioned into a Jewish state and an Arab state. King Ibn Saud sent a letter to Truman warning that such a solution would "lead to a deathblow to American interests in Arab countries."

Above all, the president resented being pushed. Matt Connolly, Mr. Truman's appointments secretary, said that American Jews were not only pressuring the White House, but were engaged in bribes and threats in favor of partition.

The U.N. voted for partition. Overnight, the British said they would relinquish their hold on Palestine to the United Nations. This was the coward's course. In the United States, the Department of Defense and the State Department were openly opposed to the creation of Israel.

Truman bristled. He favored a trusteeship, which meant a homeland for Jews but not a nation. At this point, Edward Jacobson stepped into the White House. He had been Truman's partner in a bankrupt haberdashery in Kansas City.

TRUMAN'S DOOR was always open to Eddie. The Jew said it was sad that Chaim Weizmann had traveled so far to see the president, but Truman refused to see him. Irritated, the president recounted how American Jews had threatened him: ". . . after all, he had been slandered and libeled by some of the leaders of his own people whom he had tried to help. . ."

Jacoson pleaded for an audience for Weizmann. Truman listened. He grinned. "You win, you bald-headed s.o.b.," he said. "I will see him." He forgot that he had ordered Warren Austin, U.N. ambassador, to move for a "trusteeship" for Palestine. Jews were stunned.

George C. Marshall was opposed to an Israeli state. Truman made promises to Weizmann, who was amazed to learn that most of the U.S. government was opposed to the wishes of the president. In the spring of 1948, Jews were dying before the heights of Jerusalem, determined that with or without American approbation they would drive the Arabs out and reclaim the Holy Land for themselves.

CLARK CLIFFORD begged the president to recognize Israel as a nation. George Marshall said that if he did, he, Marshall, would vote against Truman in the 1948 election.

On May 14th, 1948, Truman ordered Ambassador Warren Austin to notify the United Nations that America recognized Israel as a nation. Austin read the message and went home.

The White House made the announcement. Israel was a nation. Truman ran for office and was elected. Near the airport at Tel Aviv, Israel named a street for Harry Truman. . .

'Application was ignored'

On Sept. 26 my application for trustee on the Palatine Township Board was hand delvered to Township Hall.

I followed The Daily Herald coverage of the proposed interviews with the candidates starting Oct. 10, the Oct. 17 executive session to determine process for selection and arrived home this week to read that Mr. Smith had been "unanimously approved for the position after being recommended over two other applicants for the job by the township administration and finance committee."

I certainly hope the other applicant was treated with more courtesy than I received from our elected township officials. My application was never acknowledged. I received absolutely no communication from the board investigating the credentials I claimed or attempting to arrange an interview despite the fact that I provided a telephone number for contact around the clock. My references which included a prominent Republican state senator were never contacted by the board.

Gentlemen of the board, please don't cry apathy from constituents when a volunteer for service receives such inconsiderate response. I shudder at the consequences I would face in the everyday business world were I to use your selection process and lack of investigatory measures.

The icing on the cake was the next day's article about the board's pleasure at three applicants and their plans to use the two not selected on an advisory council to take homeowners' complaints. What makes the board so sure they can get participants when they use The Daily Herald to communicate with those to whom they are referring?

'Save ERA'

Ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment seemed such a certainty after Congressional passage. Now — five years later — we have watched defeat after defeat after defeat; we have seen the growing strength of Phyllis Shafly's Eagle Forum/Stop ERA; we have heard the irrational arguments of the Pink Ladies;" and we still need three more states to ratify.

With only a little over a year left, why don't we hear more cries of dismay? Have we become complacent? we not care that a constitutional amendment, guaranteeing all persons' right to equality, irregardless of sex, may slip through our fingers? Do we not care that women's only constitutional right is the right to vote? Do we not care that existing Illinois laws and judicial rulings, which supposedly already guarantee women's rights, may be rescinded or ignored at any time on anyone's whim, without a constitutional base? Do we not care that under these same laws, women have actually lost ground? Do we not care about the rest of the women in the nation? Do we not care about our daughters' future in a society we know nothing about? Do YOU care enough to do something about it???

Tribe may set a national trend

Is a nation of 512 Penobscot Indians possible?

Tom Tiede

PENOBSCOT RESERVATION, Maine — It has been a year of community discontent in this region of the continent. First it was Quebec discussing separation from Canada. Then, in order, it was Martha's Vinyard (Massachusetts), Salisbury Beach (New Hampshire) and Otisfield (Maine) reconsidering their geopolitical arrangements.

Now, according to rumor and official feats, it is the Indians who are about to secede. From the United States. The scenario is thus: if the Penobscot and Passamaquoddy tribes prevail in their current land claims of nearly two-thirds of the state of Maine, they will set themselves up as a sovereign nation of aboriginal peoples.

No less an observer than Maine's governor believes the separation is possible. James B. Longley says the Indian claim to 12 million acres of his state is merely "the tip of the iceberg." He insists that "citizens within the Indian community and some liberal extremists on the outside" are now seriously preparing for autonomous status.

WHAT'S MORE, Longley suggests, the Maine experience may be part of a grand design in America. That is to say: as Maine tribes go, so may those of the rest of the nation. A Longley aide says he wouldn't be surprised if cooperating aboriginals "tried to set up several nations, in New York, in the Dakotas, and in the Southwest."

An archipelago of independent Indian states? Most tribal spokesmen in Maine say the idea is absurd. A few, however, do not close their minds to it. Nicholas Sapiel, tribal governor of the Penobscots, says that independence is probably the dream of most Indians: "I think most of us feel we are more Indian than we are American."

Sapiel says this feeling is especially true among the 512 aboriginals who live on this Penobscot reservation. And, he adds, if any tribes were to withdraw from the United States, the Penobscot would likely and logically be among them. Actually, Sapiel shrugs, the Indians here have never considered themselves part of the U.S. anyway.

AT LEAST PHYSICALLY, the Penobscots are totally removed from the mainland. Their curious preserve consists of 146 islands in the Penobscot River. The tribe says its reservation exists from river bank to river bank, thus it "is not a piece of Maine or the Union." Technically, non-Indian access to the reservation is by permission only.

But the Penobscot's assertions of sovereignty are rooted more in history than in the location of their grounds. Sapiel says the tribe is unique in America in that "we never signed away our rights as a separate people." Sapiel says Penobscots made several treaties with the colonialists, but only for the division of lands.

Ken Thompson, a Maine attorney and former husband of a Penobscot woman, agrees that "strictly speaking" the tribe is still a nation of its own. "I've researched the matter completely, and Sapiel is correct. The Penebscots were never conquered, they were never taken over, and they never agreed to become part of the U.S."

No doubt, says Thompson, the colonialists believed they had won the Penobscots. As example, one English governor led an expedition of troops into Penobscot country in 1758, telling the natives that he was there to "make the land English." But since the Indians did not understand English then, they couldn't very well accept subjugation.

MOREOVER, SOME years later, Thompson says the colonialists called for a powwow with the Penobscots to discuss treaty revisions. Thompson says the "great White Fathers" showed up at the appointed time, but the Penobscots didn't appear until one month later. "Does that sound like they were a conquered, groveling, assimilated people?"

NOT EVERYONE HERE subscribes to the independent attitude. But John Sapiel, a relative of the tribal chief, says the ranks of the "traditionalists" are growing. "We want out of the white culture," he says. "We want out of the drugs and the alchohol and the atom bombs. That stinks. We think there are better ways in which to live."

One better way would be in a Penobscot nation. John Sapiel believes it's coming. He says the highest point in Maine, Mt. Katahdin, is believed by his people to be the center of the universe: "And one day we will own the mountain again; it's where life begins, it's where the gods are, and it will be the capital so to speak, of our country."

Carter reorganization a success until now—real tests still to come

by LUCIA MOUAT

Will President Carter succeed in reining in Washington's sprawling bureaucracy?

Many other presidents have tried and failed.

So far the Carter reorganization record largely is a success story: Roughly 500 of the 2,000 governmental units inherited by his administration have been merged or abolished.

HOWEVER, THE real tightening up has barely begun. And its outcome is uncertain.

Savings so far are about $20 million out of a $458 billion annual federal budget. And first goals — trimming the White House staff and federal advisory committees, and the creation of a new Energy Dept. — were considered fairly easy shots.

"There have been some minor skirmishes but it's nothing like what we're going to be facing very soon," concedes top Carter reorganization man Harrison Wellford. "The real tests come next year," he says.

At least eight proposals from the 31 reorganization projects under way are slated to go to Capitol Hill in 1978.

WELLFORD, executive associate Director of the Office of Management and Budget, concedes that all of the early entries — involving a streamlining of natural resource, law enforcement, and personnel management services — probably will face rough going.

Under debate on the Hill at the moment and already facing rough questiong is the President's proposed merger of the U.S. Information Agency and the State Department's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs into a new agency for international communications.

The finishing touches also are being put on another reorganization proposal to make top management more productive by allowing sanctions for incompetent workers and bonuses for excellent workers. The idea, says Wellford, is to put executive service on a much more businesslike basis.

In Wellford's view, the problems of government are more political than managerial. Reorganization is no exception — affecting "networks of power" and "routes of access" by special interest groups to key decision-makers.

THOSE REORGANIZATION plans which are sent to the Hill take effect in 60 days unless either house vetoes them.

For one, Congress created many of the units that would be merged or eliminated and many legislators can be expected to take a protectionist view. Michael Balzano, former head of Action, argues there is an "invisible alliance" of dependence that has built up between some permanent congressional and agency staff which will resist change.

Welford says the Carter reorganization aim is not so much the paring of dollars or manpower as it is improving the efficiency and effectiveness of government services. In that respect the taxpayer would get more for each dollar he pays.

Carter has pledged no one would lose his or her job as a result of the streamlining. It is a point which critics have attacked sharply as an indicator that the changes will be more cosmetic than substantial.

"IS CARTER GOING to please the federal work force or the American people — and he can't do both — asks Balzano, author of American Enterprise Institute's "Reorganiing the Federal Bureaucracy."

Wellford points to slow growth of the federal civilian work force during the past decade and the 10 per cent annual attrition rate for his answer.

"By artful use of the vacancies, we can reduce the numbers," he says. "But the trick is really to get more productivity out of people than we've been getting and that's what we're trying to do."

Wellford says some of the offshoots of reorganization have been as significant as the direct moves. Among them:

• Requests to create governmental units such as advisory communities are down sharply from last year.

The trend is away from constant add-ons," he says. "Anyone who wants to come forward with a proposal for a new unit knows he's going to get a hostile reception and that he'd better have an awfully good reason for it."

• Similarly, many departments and agencies — from Agriculture and Health, Education and Welfare to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission — are scrambling to reorganize independently.

"OMB isn't a broding omnipresence to be seen as a threat. But if agencies know the President is watching and that if they don't get their own houses in order, they may be subject to a large reorganization effort, it gives an awful lot of leverage to reform-minded administrators. The sword of Damocles is hanging there and they realize it."

WELLFORD, WHO has a law degree from Georgetown and a doctoral Degree in government from Harvard and who has worked for both Ralph Nader and the late Michigan Sen. Philip A. Hart, has done extensive research on previous government reorganization efforts. He says he is convinced that President Carter's has the most solid chance of all for succeeding.

"What distinguishes our effort is not the problems we define or the solutions we prescribe for them — They've been around for a long time," he says. "What's different is the process."

In addition to public hearings, for instance, at which more than 5,000 Americans have testified, the OMB borrows career workers from different agencies. In doing so; reorganizers get more practical guidance than they might from a blue-ribbon committee of outsiders, and hopefully win some valuable converts n the process.

Another important plus Wellford says is the President's strong personal interest in more efficient government.

"In a real sense that's the lynchpin of whether or not we'll be successful," he says.

Meeting clamps down on growth

HOUSTON, Tex., fastest growing city in the United States and energy and murder capital of Texas, might seem to be a place for a conference devoted to finding alternatives to growth.

Jim Wright, majority leader of the Texas House of Representatives, told the second "World Alternatives to Growth" conference here, with his gaze fixed firmly on his Texas constituents, that "there is no alternative to growth." The 500-strong audience did not agree.

The conference, sponsored by the Club of Rome, Mitchell Energy Corporation, and the University of Houston, drew a big turnout from American transnational companies, diplomats, civil servants and academics from a wide range of disciplines.

THIS WAS NOT A conference for those eco-freaks who think the first major disaster for mankind was the introduction of agriculture.

The Club of Rome is concerned about actual problems of industrial society, like energy and resource shortages, and population pressures, and for it the problem is how to move toward forms of such a society that are sustainable, that is, that do not press up against limits of resources or population.

The shortcomings of the initial (1972) "Limits to Growth" study commissioned by the Club of Rome are not disguised — indeed many of the criticisms concerning the relative rather than absolute nature of many of the limits, as well as the great flexibility and learning capacity of industrial societies, are now accepted.

But the dominant view at the conference was summed up by Dennis Meadows, chief author of the original "Limits to Growth" study, when he forecast that "there are going to be massive discontinuities ahead."

IT WAS NOT NECESSARY to argue the "limits" thesis any more, he said. Events would demonstrate it; the 1973 oil crisis was only a foretaste. What were needed now were ideas that could help guide policy makers when the problems arrived.

He was echoed by Aurelio Peccei, founder of the Club of Rome and a former director of Fiat, who emphasized how short a time was left for persuading the rest of the world to agree.

These views were strongly challenged by the licensed optimist at the conference, Herman Kahn, who presented his now familiar message — faith and technology will see us through. But it is a measure of how the two sides have moved towards one another that even he admits growth will stop eventually and that a sustainable society will come — in 200 years' time.

Those people that do not like the sedate life-style of a sustainable society, he suggested, will have to start exploring space in earnest.

AND THEN TECHNOLOGY smote Kahn.

Mihajlo Mesarovic and Barry Hughes, from Case Western University, in a dazzling display of computer virtuosity, used a telephone linkup with their computer in Cleveland to provide instantaneous testiing of his assumptions and predictions.

Their "world integrated model and assessment of policies tool" predicted, among other horrors, that America — following current policies — might need 5,000 nuclear reactors by the year 2025, and that bringing oil supply and demand into balance would require an oil price of at least $37 per barrel and maybe $48, in today's dollars, by the year 2001.

Kahn wisely proposed that next time Case Western and the Hudson Institute might devise some joint computer programs.

For those who distrust number-crunching there were plenty of other ideas. For instance:

• An international quota system to slow the depletion of resources. The present market system, its author contended, did not take into account the total through-put of resources, and its costing of resources still in the ground was short-term and arbitrary.

• An attack on the "scandal" that only 1 per cent of the resource transfer from the developed to the developing world is energy technology, most of it nuclear, and that no "income" — renewable — energy schemes, are being encouraged.

The claim, made by many participants, that transnational companies are the only available agency that can promote adjustment to an era of scarcity and limits while maintaining an industrial economy with its high living standards. One serious problem: the conflict that could arise between the production and marketing divisions of the same company.

• A proposal from the Oslo Resource Policy Group that "stable-volume" industries should be developed.

But what happens to employment? Randers proposed that in a stable-volume industry labor should be treated as a fixed cost and subsidized if necessary.

Adventures of your Garbageman

Something Seldom Thought Of . . .

Forgive us, if we're proud of some things about our service. One is an exceptional safety record.

Sure, with 25 trucks traveling thousands of miles each week, we have occasional traffic brushes. These happen mostly when a motorist follows too closely (please don't). Then, if an emergency occurs (a child runs into the street, or a car makes an unaware crossing) our driver has to slap on his super-safety air brakes, and sometimes a too-close car behind smacks into his rear.

Our drivers don't want accidents. Not just for the record. They can get hurt, too, and they don't like to risk hurting others. (We've had drivers tip over their trucks to avoid crashing into somebody else.)

Why we're a liitle proud: In serving the community this past half-century, we've had a minimun of accidents — and moreover, in all of our 50 years of operation, we've never had an accident which involved a fatality.

House chucks rules, honors Hubert

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House chucked ts own rules, set business aside and paid unprecedented tribute Thursday to a member of what it calls "the other body" — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota.

"We asked you here because we love you," Democratic leader Jim Wright told Humphrey, during an emotional, hour-long welcoming ceremony that began and ended with standing ovations for the cancer-stricken senator.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill himself broke the musty oratorical rule against referring to a member of "the other body" by name, saying, "Hubert Humphrey, you are the most genuine liberal this country could ever produce. Your presence in this House brings honor, pride and distinction to it."

THE HOUSE HAS never, in the memory of veteran observers, interrupted its business to honor a sitting member of the Senate.

Thursday, it gave Humphrey a rousing out-pouring of sentiment reminiscent of the thunderous welcome his own chamber gave him a week ago.

The floor was jammed with members and staff workers. The public galleries were filled to capacity when the senator, his wife, his sister and a niece walked into the chamber to a two-minute standing ovation.

Humphrey returned a week ago from a two-month medical absence during which he learned he has inoperable pelvic cancer.

The House made its tribute all the more singular by insisting Humphrey deliver his own remarks from the speaker's podium — where presidents deliver the State of Union addresses — and not merely from the weil where ordinary debate is conducted.

"THIS IS AN honor that I never believed would happen," he told the chamber.

Noting jovially he had finally achieved his dream of flying on Air Force One, the presidential jet, when President Carter flew him from Minnesota to Washington last week, he added:

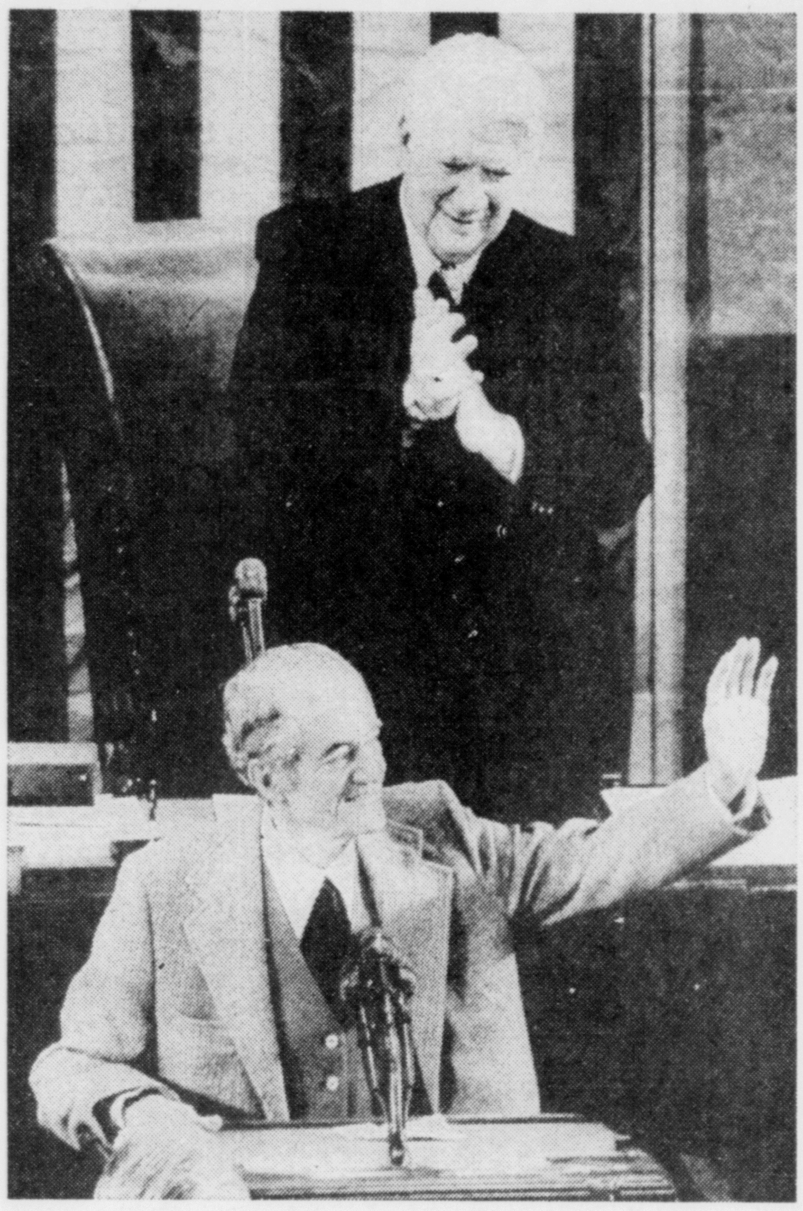
"Now I'm standing where the President of the United States stands to give the State of the Union address.

"My goodness!"

He noted he had never served in the House himself, and said that was because "when I found out that you have rules limiting speeches to two minutes or five minutes, I decided that would drive me into utter frustration."

He spoke for 21 minutes.

Then he walked back to his seat to the roar of another standing ovation, got a kiss and a pat on the cheeks from wife Muriel and set off shaking hands with everyone within reach.



SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE Thomas O'Neill applauds Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey as the Minnesota Democrat prepares to make a few remarks to that body Thursday. The lawmakers honored Humphrey, who learned in August he had inoperable cancer.

Concorde noise at JFK airport low: FAA study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration said Thursday the first few flights of the British-French Concorde in and out of New York's John F. Kennedy airport were quieter than earlier tests at Washington's Dulles Airport.

The FAA said its readings still were inconclusive and were based on only three takeoffs and three landings since the supersonic jet began its trial service to JFK.

The figures generally are lower than readings taken in another survey at Dulles, but those figures were compiled over the course of a year and covered 619 takeoffs and landings.

MEANWHILE, the House environment subcommittee met without publicity Thursday to discuss a Concorde noise report prepared by its own investigators.

None of the conclusions given at the closed meeting were disclosed publicly, and subcommittee aides said they would not be released until approved by the parent Government Operations Committee.

The FAA figures on the Concorde experience at JFK showed that on departure from runway 31-L, the average effective perceived noise levels in decibels were 87.7 at Howard Beach and 107.5 at Belle Harbor.

On approaches, the decibel level at sites near the flight tracks was 99.7. At Dulles over the course of a year, departure no9se levels have averaged 119.4 while landings have averaged 116.5.

IN GENERAL, FAA believes the Concorde is twice as loud on takeoff as subsonic jets and about the same on landing.

The figures also showed that at Howard Beach a 707 jet on takeoff produced a reading of 95.8, louder than the Concorde. However, the 707 flew directly over the noise monitoring station while the Concorde banked sharply to the left as required before it reached the sensors.

The figures are in "effective" perceived noise level decibels." The New York Port Authority uses a different calculation called "perceived noise decibels," the FAA said, under which the figures would be higher.

Bank deposits here increase 17%; area's growth cited as a key factor

by JOHN N. FRANK

Northwest suburban growth and economic strength are reflected in a 17.3 per cent increase in total bank deposits at area banks, presidents of local banks say.

Total deposits in the area's 24 banks approached the $1 billion mark this year, climbing to $939,729,000 as of Sept. 30. On the same date in 1976 deposits were $800,778,000.

"I would think that we generally have one of the most dynamic and growing areas in Chicagoland. I would think that it (increasing deposits) is a general trend for our area," said Fred Wolf, of the Northwest Trust & Savings Bank of Arlington Heights.

TOTAL ASSETS — outstanding loans, reserves and real estate — for area banks also increased 17.3 per cent during the last 12 months, going from $896,008,000 at the end of Sept. 1976 to $1,051,866,000 at the end of September 1977.

"Most of it we would consider normal growth. This is still a very expanding market out here and it's in line with our forecasts," said Richard Padula, president of the Mount Prospect State bank, which now ranks first among area banks in total assets.

Deposits in Mount Prospect State Bank increased 5.5 per cent during the last 12 months to a total of $156,763,000.

"The banks are aggressive and I think competition is high" for deposits, Wolf said.

"Ususally you would expect to see two increases, one from inflation and one from the growth of the area," said Robert Mills, president of the First Arlington National Bank, which ranks fifth in assets and deposits.

OFFICIALS contacted agreed the growth of the past year should continue in their institutions, barring unforeseen downturns in the economy.

"We think the growth will continue. If the economy stays as it is there will be much more growth in the northwest suburbs," said Neale A. Grippentrog, president of the Wheeling Trust & Savings Bank, the second largest bank in the area.

Winn Davidson, president of the Bank of Palatine, said part of the increase must be attributed to the overall growth in the money supply over the last year.

FOLLOWING THE Wheeling Trust and Savings in the No. 2 spot in terms of assets are:

Dow rallies to hold at 800 level; up 1.8

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dow Jones industrial average rallied to hold above the 800 level Thursday as the stock market closed mixed in the face of a sharp rise in wholesale prices. Trading was moderate.

The Dow average closed at 802.67, up 1.82 points. It had been off three points at the outset, up two in the early afternoon and down a point an hour before the close. Five Dow stocks were trading minus their dividends, penalizing the average by 1.82 points.

The Dow's sharp 21.83-point loss the previous three sessions, plus the fact it is down more than 200 points for the year, has made many blue-chip issues attractive and kept the average from falling below 800.

The government triggered early selling by reporting a .8 per cent rise in the October wholesale price index. This amounted to a 9.6 per cent hike on an annual basis, the largest since a 13.2 per cent jump in April.

U.S. car sales up 20% in October

Domestic car sales in October jumped nearly 20 per cent and produced indications the American car companies were starting to erode the market share held by foreign imports, according to figures released Thursday. GM continued to top the domestic market share with 55.8 per cent in October, followed by Ford with 29.4 per cent, Chrysler with 13 per cent and AMC with 1.8 per cent. However, Ford was the only domestic company to have a monthly share percentage higher than the over-all share for the first 10 months of the year. The Ford Motor Co. said Thursday it will close its St. Louis, Mo., assembly plant for one week beginning Nov. 7 because of a shortage of V-8 engines and automatic transmissions used in full-size Mercury models. About 3,000 employes will be idled, a Ford spokesman said.

Chrysler Corp. said Thursday it will start production of its Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon minicars on schedule this month and is expanding facilities for building Chrysler LeBarons and Dodge Diplomats. The No. 3 car company said its Belvidere plant will reopen Nov. 21 to start making the small cars with a work force of more than 4,000. It has been closed since July 15 for a $40 million conversion program.

Chicago window washers strike

Window washers struck Chicago's skyscrapers and high-rise apartments Wednesday in a dispute over a new contract. Glass-enclosed landmarks such as the Sears Tower and John Hancock Center were without the window-washing service but the union did not set up pickets to interfere with other building services. Key issues in the strike involve pay increases and time clocks. The workers currently earn $6.50 an hour plus 15 cents an hour for scaffold work.

Firms to increase spending: poll

Businessmen plan to increase their spending for new plants and equipment by only 3 per cent in real terms next year as they remain wary of government actions, according to a survey. "Businesses are likely to remain cautious because there is still a great deal of uncertainty about major legislation including the energy proposals and tax reform," the economics department of McGraw-Hill Publications Co. said in its annual fall survey of preliminary spending plans.

12 truck firms charged in U.S. suit

The Interstate Commerce Commission charged in a federal suit Thursday that 12 large Midwestern trucking companies illegally retained $2.3 million in inadvertent double payments from shippers. In Chicago, actions were filed against Long Transportation for allegedly keeping $150,000, Sturm Freightways for allegedly retaining $60,000, Liberty Trucking for allegedly retaining $20,000, Freeport Fast Freight for allegedly retaining $20,000, O.K. Motor Service for allegedly retaining $14,000, R-W Service System for allegedly retaining $132,000 and Sims Motor Transportation Lines for allegedly retaining $29,000.

New factory orders slow down

New factory orders rose 0.4 per cent in September, a sharp slowdown from the healthy August level, the Commerce Dept. said Thursday. Factory orders, which often signal future economic activity, increased by a slight $500 million to $112 billion, after rising by a revised 2.7 per cent in August.

Money supply up to $334.6 billion

The country's basic money supply spurted $1.4 billion this week to $334.6 billion, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported Thursday. Commercial and industrial loans at major New York City banks rose $156 million in comparison with a rise of $386 million the previous week. Short-term interest rates were mixed. The key rate on federal funds, the uncommitteed reserves banks lend each other, rose to an average of 6.5 per cent from 6.49 per cent. The three-month treasury bill rate climbed to 6.14 per cent from 6.11 per cent, but the average rate on 90 to 119-day dealer placed commercial paper loans fell to 6.55 per cent from 6.57 per cent.

Change in discount note rates

The federal home loan banks Thursday announced a change in the rates posted for their consolidated discount notes. The new rate schedule is as follows: 30-59 days, 6.30 per cent; 60-89 days, 6.30; 90-179 days, 6.35, and 180-270 days, 6.40.

Many air travelers fare poorly

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK — Airlines are stepping up their discrimination against conventional air travelers, people who travel on business, who have to attend to a sudden personal errand, or who make their vacation plans at the last minute. Conventional fares have been rising steadily, while discount fares, for those of you who can plan flights well ahead of time, are being cut to the bone.

"Over the past three years, prices of conventional scheduled flights have jumped close to 30 per cent on many routes," says Cliff Cook, editor of Jax Fax, a magazine for travel agents. Just last month, United Air Lines filed for a 1.2 per cent rate increase on most of its U.S. fares, on top of a 1.8 per cent increase that just went into effect. Other airlines are expected to follow UAL's lead.

Occasionally, bargains do become available to the everyday traveler. One of the airlines serving your city may file for a lower fare on a particular route. Until that fare is met by the competition (which it usually is), you can save some money by flying with the fare cutter.

SOMETIMES ONE airline may continue to offer lower fares between two specific cities. There's usually a reason, for example, the flight may not leave at a convenient time for business travelers, or may involve two stops rather than a direct flight. If you don't mind those things, the cheap flight may save you 20 to 30 per cent.

Most of the big bargains, though, are fares you sign up for in advance. The biggest publicity goes to cuts in international fares, for example, Britain's Laker Airways first-come, first-served $236 round trip, New York to London. But substantial discounts are now available on many domestic flights.

Super Saver fares provide discounts of up to 45 per cent for people willing to pay 30 days in advance, stay seven to 45 days, and fly in the middle of the week. These are available on transcontinental flights, and flights between many other major U.S. cities. Ask about them when you call an airline for price information.

On the international side, the low Laker Airways fare has done wonders for the price of a trip to London. American carriers now offer two competing fares leaving from New York: a Super Saver budget fore of $256, for people willing to pay about three weeks in advance of the week they want to leave and travel on a specific day of that week selected by the airline; a standby fare of $256, available up to three hours before departure.

These airline price wars are attracting a lot of customers, a travel agent told my associate, Anne Colamosca. It's getting hard to find a Christmas charter to popular cities; the airline's own low-priced flights are also filling up fast. Discount fares generally have to be paid 30 to 45 days in advance, so if you're considering a Christmas (or later) trip, you'd better move fast. A popular vacation plan is to fly by inexpensive charter (booked by travel agents) and use the savings to finance a stay in a top hotel.

Wise investments help McDonald's grow

One of the first basic decisions I made affected the heart of my franchise system and how it would develop. It was that the corporation was not going to get involved in being a supplier for its operators. My belief was that I had to help the individual operator succeed in every way I could. His success would ensure my success. But I couldn't do that and, at the same time, treat him as a customer. There is a basic conflict in trying to treat a man as a partner on the one hand while selling him something at a profit on the other.

Another judgment I made early in the game and enforced through the years was that there would be no pay telephones, no juke boxes, no vending machines of any kind in McDonald's restaurants. Many times operators have been tempted by the side income some of these machines offer, and I've stood firm. All of those things create unproductive traffic in a store and encourage loitering that can disrupt your customers. This would downgrade the family image we wanted to create for McDonald's.

Furthermore, in some areas the vending machines were controlled by the crime syndicate, and I waned no part of that.

OUR FIRST THREE franchises were sold in Fresno, Los Angeles and Reseda, Calif. Those stores opened the year after the Des Plaines operation got started. It was easier to swing deals in California because landlords could be shown the successful operation the McDonald brothers had in San Bernardino, and consequently, were more readily persuaded to put up our kind of building for lease to my francisees. It was painfully slow going, like trying to ice skate on bare concrete but we worked like mad, and in the last eight months of 1956 we opened eight stores, only one of them in California.

Harry Sonneborn, my financial expert, and I agreed that we wanted McDonald's to be more than just a name used by many different people. We wanted to build a restaurant system that would be known for food of consistenly high quality and uniform methods of preparation. Our aim, of course, was to ensure repeat business based on the system's reputation rather than on the quality of a single store or operator. Being in the restaurant development business would mean that we could plan a strong system in which locations could be developed by McDonald's as part of an over-all long-range, nationwide marketing program.

Harry's solution, the formation of Franchise Realty Corp., was to my mind a stroke of financing genius.

Franchise Realty was the supreme example of a guy putting his money where his mouth is. I did a lot of talking about the ideal way to develop McDonald's with the kind of quality and uniformity that would ensure our success. And when Harry came up with a way to make it possible, I backed it by going into hock for everything I had — my house, my car, you name it. Talk about grinding it out!

We started Franchise Realty corp. with $1,000 paid-in capital, and Harry parlayed that cash investment into something like $170 million worth of real estate. His idea, simply put, was that we would induce a property owner to lease us his land on a subordinated basis. That is, he would take back a second mortgage so that we could go to a lending institution (in the early days it was a bank) and arrange a first mortgage on the building; the landlord would subordinate his land to the building.

ONE OF THE REASONS this subordinated lease idea worked so well was that in the late '50s, we didn't have the proliferation of franchise operations and the fierce competition for commercial firnge property that developed in the course of the next 20 years. Another reason was that both Harry and I were pretty good salesmen, and we could romance a property owner with the notion of earning at least a little something from his vacant land.

This was the beginning of real income for McDonald's. Harry devised a formula for the monthly payments being made by our operators that paid our own mortgage and other expenses plus a profit. We received this set monthly minimum or a percentage of the volume the operator did, whichever was greater. After a time we began realizing substantial revenues from the formula, and we could see that we were merely nibbling around the edges of this huge hamburger frontier we were exploring.

In one of the impromptu meetings that Harry (president), June (secretary-treasurer), and I (chairman) frequently had after hours in the office or in my home,Harry said, "We are doing fine with these bank mortgages, but if we are going to gain any stature in the financial community, we are going to have to get some big institutional investors to back us." I agreed, and Harry went after the insurance companies. The first deal he made was with All-American Life Insurance Co. in Chicago. They agreed to arrange a number of mortgages for us. Then he succeeded in lining up Central Standard Life, also in Chicago.

This was great news. We were moving ahead, gathering momentum; we could see the day that we would start making a profit. I felt deeply indebted to Harry and June. They worked tirelessly, and I knew that both of them were neglecting their family obligations completely so that they could stay on top of things in our rapidly building operation. It was a little easier for me, perhaps, because of my continuing cold war between Ethel, my daughter, and me. My total commitment to business had long since been established in my home. But that made me feel all the more grateful toward Harry and June. I couldn't give them raises to compensate them for their past efforts, but I could make sure that they would be rewarded when McDonald's became one of the country's major companies, which I never doubted it would. I gave them stock — 10 per cent to June and 20 per cent to Harry — and ultimately it would make them rich. At the time, of course, Chicago Transit Authorty tokens would have been worth more.

WE WERE DIFFERENT, Harry and I, but for a long time we were able to splice our efforts so that the differences made us stronger. Fred Turner, our first corporate operations chief who joined our headquarters staff in 1957 after a year working in several McDonald's stores, added another dimension to the combination. It became part of Fred's assignment in helping new operators to open their stores, to deal with the local suppliers of meat, buns, and condiments, and this exposure, combined with his experience at the griddle, helped us make significant changes in the way things were supplied to us and how they were packaged.

We were buying our buns in the Midwest from Louis Kuchuris' Mary Ann Bakery. At first they were cluster buns, attached to each other in clusters of four to six, and they were only partially sliced. Fred pointed out that it would be much easier and faster for a griddle man if we had individual buns instead of clusters and if they were sliced all the way through. The baker could afford to do it our way because of the large quantities of buns we were ordering.

Fred also worked with a cardboard box manufacturer on the design of a sturdy, reusable box for our buns. Handling these boxes instead of the customary packages of 12 buns reduced the baker's packaging cost, so he was able to give us a better price on the buns. It also reduced out shipping costs and streamlined our griddle operations.

Fred, later to become McDonald's president and then chairman of the board, would go to Milwaukee or Moline or Kalamazoo or wherever a new operation was starting, and he'd call on a baker and tell him about McDonald's and the buns we would like him to make for us.

SUPPLYING BUNS and other materials to McDonald's was the break of a lifetime for many of these men. Mary Ann Bakery, for example, was a small organization when it started dealing with us. Now it has a plant with a quarter-mile-long conveyor belt for cooling buns after they're baked. The firm uses more than a million pounds of flour a month to make buns for us. Mary Ann also has a trucking company that services many McDonald's.

Fred applied the same sort of thinking he'd used on buns to all the other supplies being purchased. It's important to make clear that Fred wasn't buying these items on behalf of the corporation, and we weren't selling to the operators. We set the standards for quality and recommended methods for packaging, but the operators themselves did the purchasing from suppliers.

We demonstrated this emphasis on details, and saw it pay off, in our approach to hamburger patties. A McDonald's hamburger patty is a piece of meat with character. the first thing that distinguishes it from the patties that many other places pass off as hamburgers is that it is all beef. There are no hearts or other alien goodies ground into our patties. The fat content of our patty is a prescribed 19 per cent and it is rigidly controlled.

We decided that our patties would be ten to the pound and that soon became the standard for the industry. Fred did a lot of experimenting in the packaging of patties, too. There was a kind of paper that was exactly right, he felt, and he tested and tested until he found out what it was. It had to have enough wax on it so the patty would pop off without sticking when you slapped it onto the griddle. But it couldn't be too stiff or the patties would slide and refuse to stack up.

The purpose of all these refinements, and we never lost sight of it, was to make our griddle man's job easier, to do quickly and well. All the other considerations of cost cutting, inventory control, and so forth were important to be sure, but they were secondary to the critical detail of what happened there at that smoking griddle. This was the vital passage in our assembly line, and the product had to flow through it smoothly or the whole plant would falter.

Nest: Going public.

This is the fifth of six excerpts from the book "Grinding It Out," by Ray Kroc, developer of McDonald's restaurants, with Robert Anderson, Contemporary Books, Copyright, 1977 by Ray Croc.

Retailers tell solid gains in October sales

The nation's major retailers Thursday reported solid gains in October sales, with most of the increases running above 10 per cent.

Sears Roebuck and Co. in Chicago said sales for the four weeks ended Oct. 29 climbed 18 per cent, $1.58 billion from $1.34 billion a year earlier. Sales through the first 39 weeks of 1977 were up 16.1 per cent to $12.36 billion, compared with $11.51 billion in the corresponding 1976 period.

J.C. Penney Co., based in Kansas City, Mo., announced a 13.1 per cent sales increase for the four-week period. Volume advanced to a record $762 million from $674 million in October 1976. Sales for the first nine months of the company's fiscal year beginning Jan. 30 totaled a recod $5.21 billion, a gain of 9.4 per cent over the year-ago level of $5.68 billion.

J.C. Penney operated 2,121 retail units at the end of October, compared with 2,070 a year ago.

IN NEW YORK, F. W. Woolworth Co. reported sales for the four weeks ended Oct. 25 advanced 8.4 per cent to a record $415.86 million from $383.58 million last year. The company said the increased sales activity in men's, women's and children's apparel and family footwear — apparent since August — picked up still further in October and was a major factor in the October results.

Montgomery Ward & Co., the Mobil Corp. unit headquartered in Chicago, announced its October sales posted a gain of 10.4 per cent at $353.62 million, compared with $320.37 million in the same 1976 four-week period. Sales for the 39 weeks totaled $3.18 billion, up 13.2 per cent from year-earlier volume of $2.81 billion.

Edward S. Donnell, chairman and chief executive officer of Montgomery Ward, cited strong increases in both retail and catalog sales. Energy-related product lines such as insulation also contributed to the improved October results.

Schenken reads Sims bid

Here is a hand from the finals of the 1931 Vanderbilt. Howard Schenken, one of the great players and the only one of the four at the table who is still alive sat South.

Hal Sims was West, Sherman Stearns, North, and William Karn, East.

Hal elected to open a semi-psychic one spade and remained silent from then on, but Willard Karn elected to sacrifice at four spades. But Howard wasn't going to give up and went to five hearts.

He ruffed the ace of spades lead and after long thought came to the conclusion that Karn would have a singleton high heart and most of the missing high-card strength. In other words, he read Sims for having just about what he did hold.

After that it became a simple matter to find the winning line of play. Howard led a low heart! Willard won with his singleton king and promptly led a small diamond. Any other lead would have given Howard no problem. Neither did this one. Howard was so sure of the location of the diamond king that he let it ride around to dummy's queen and made his five-heart contract.

Air ferns get creepy, grow in the tropics

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Nancy Martin, 12, of Manheim, Pa., for her question:

WHAT ARE AIR FERNS?

Ferns come in many shapes and sizes. Some have such tiny leaves that they almost look like moss, while others are so huge that they are as tall as some trees. Ferns 40 feet tall can be found in the Pacific Islands and South America. They have thick, woody trunks and feathery crowns of massive leaves. Tree ferns are common in the damp mountainous regions in the tropics.

Ferns can be found almost anywhere in the world, from the hot tropics to the cold Arctic Circle in the north. You'll find them growing among rocks and cliffs or in shady, moist woods. They live in coastal regions and in spots that are over 15,000 feet high.

More than 10,000 different kinds of ferns can be found on earth. About 300 of the varieties can be found growing in North America.

One of the more interesting types is called an air fern. It can be found in tropical locations and has long stems that creep upward on tree trunks. The ferns live high above the ground.

Called epiphytes, air ferns get their nourishment from the moist air and from the decayed matter that collects on the bark of the trees. They are indeed very interesting plants.

Leaves of ferns are called fronds. They are large when compared with the plant's stem and come in many forms. Some are heart-shaped while others are like long straps. The leaves usually develop in coils and are often covered with brown scales.

Ferns reproduce by means of spores and sex cells. Small cases contain the spores and they grow grouped in dots or lines on the back or sides of the leaves. When they ripen, the cases burst open and the spores fall to the ground. Each one can develop into a tiny green plant that is shaped like a heart. The tiny plant develops special tissues that produce both female and male cells. The male cell comes from an organ called the antheridium, which can be compared to the anther in flowers, although the fern is flowerless. The female organ of the fern is called the archegonium.

When the sex cells become mature, the male cell swims through the moisture on the plant to the female cell and fertilizes it. Then the egg grows into the mature fern plant.

Botanists call the reproduction process of the fern the alternation of generations. The two generations are the large fern which produces the spores, and the tiny fern plant which produces the sex cells.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Rodney Doritz, 14, of Darlington, S.C., for his question:

WHAT IS A CARACAL?

A caracal, who is a member of the cat family, is one of the best-looking animals you'll ever see. He's sometimes called a Persian lynx and is related to the lynxes.

You'll find friend caracal in some North American zoos but to see him on his native soil, you will have to travel to India or Africa.

A caracal has tufts of long hair located on the tips of his ears, much like a lynx. The lynx's tufts are brown, however, while the caracal's are black. His fur is soft and reddish-brown or fawn-colored. He eats meat and hunts other animals.

The caracal's fur isn't used for women's coats, and he shouldn't be confused with the word caracul, the loosely cured fur of the karakul, a breed of Asiatic sheep.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

LOCATION AND DESIGN APPROVAL RECEIVED

Notice is hereby given to all interested persons that approval of the Location and Design for the improvement of Illinois Route 68 from Illinois Route 59 to Ela Road has been received from the Federal Highway Administration of the United States Department of Transportation.

A Public Hearing is not required for this improvement since it does not require the acquisition of right-of-way, has no adverse effect upon abutting property, nor does it change the layout or function of connecting roads or streets.

In accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 10e(2) of Federal Highway Policy Memorandum 7-7-2, it has been determined that this project is a non-major action.

The proposed improvement consists primarily of the widening and resurfacing of Illinois Route 68 from Illinois Route 59 to Ela Road. The present 20 foot roadway will be widened to 24 feet with an 8 foot shoulder on either side. In addition, the intersection of Illinois Route 68 and Barrington Road will be widened and channelized to provide a 12 foot left turn lane on each of the four legs. Traffic signals will also be installed.

Illinois Route 68 will be widened and channelized at its intersection with Ela Road. A 12 foot wide left turn lane will be provided both eastbound and westbound traffic in addition to the 12 foot through lane in each direction.

Maps, drawings, the Project Report, and other pertinent information concerning the proposed improvement are available for inspection by the public. This material may be viewed and copied at the offices of the Illinois Department of Transportation, 1000 Plaza Drive, Schaumburg, Illinois, 60195.

Talent for sale in baseball draft today

by FRED McMANE

NEW YORK (UPI) — With free agents such as Larry Hisle, Richie Zisk, Lyman Bostock, Rich Gossage and Mike Torrez providing the biggest lure, owners will plunge head-first into the talent pool today when major league baseball conducts its second annual re-entry draft.

There are 88 free agents, including 553 from major league rosters, available on the auction block this year and with the world champion New York Yankees having proven last year that money, if spent abundantly and wisely, can buy happiness, it is likely that more clubs will get into the heavy bidding action.

Kansas City, which did not sign any free agents a year ago, has announced it will make an all-out effort to land at least one in an attempt to avoid another runnerup finish to the Yankees in the American League playoffs. Boston and Texas, second place finisners in their respective AL divisions, also are expected to be active participants and the Philadelphia Phillies in the National League have their eye on one man they believe can get them that elusive pennant next season.

Texas, in fact, may have been a bit too eager to get started. The Rangers are under suspicion of "tampering" with regard to Hisle, and according to Texas owner Brad Corbett, the commissioner's office has threatened his team with severe disciplinary action should the Rangers go ahead with their plans to draft Hisle.

CORBETT, HOWEVER, says he isn't going to be pushed around by the commissioner.

"We will not be bullied," Corbett said. "We will do everything possible to sign him (Hisle). Yes, we will go ahead and draft him."

Corbett, though, could be facing severe disciplinary action. A similar incident a year ago involving the Atlanta Braves and Gary Matthews resulted in Braves' owner Ted Turner being suspended a year.

Because the number of free agents this year is so high, each club will be allowed to sign as many as five players — a increase of three from last year when only 25 major leaguers were available in the draft. A player, however, is allowed to be selected by no more than 14 teams, including the one he played for last year.

If a team loses more than five players, it is allowed to sign as many as it loses. The Minnesota Twins figure to get hurt the most as they have 10 players listed as free agents, including Hisle and Bostock.

Clubs losing six-year players are awarded compensation in the form of a draft choice from next June's free agent draft. Teams selecting in positions 1-13 would give up their second round pick while clubs in the 14-26 ranking would surrender their first round position.

THE DRAFT WILL begin at 8:30 a.m. today with the Toronto Blue Jays selecting first. Toronto, which along with expansion mate Seattle could not participate in last year's draft, will be followed by Atlanta and the leagues will then alternate choices in inverse order according to their regular season records.

The Yankees, who last year spent nearly $6 million to sign free agents Reggie Jackson and Don Gullett, will not draft until next-to-last. However, where you draft really doesn't matter, since each team usually has at least one chance to select negotiation rights to the player it regards as the most valuable potential addition to its roster.

What counts most is cash. Those teams willing to spend the big money have the inside track on the quality players. Players such as Zisk, Hisle, Torrez, Gossage and Bostock should command well more than $1 million apiece for a long-term contract.

While there are a greater number of free agents this year, there are fewer "blue-chip" players available. Most of the players on the list are of mediocre or unknown quantity and don't figure to become rich overnight.

"I hear the owners are all saying they're going to be cautious, they're going to take their time," says super agent Jerry Kapstein, who last year negotiated contracts for 11 of the 25 players on the free agent list. "I think the quality players will do well, but it's really impossible to predict."

UNLIKE A YEAR ago when the likes of Jackson, Gullett, Joe Rudi, Matthews, Bill Campbell, Rollie Fingers, Don Baylor, Sal Bando, Dave Cash, Wayne Garland, Gene Tenace and Bobby Grich were available, there are only five playres on this year's list who can expect to attract a lot of interest.

Hisle, a 30-year-old outfielder for the Minnesota Twins, should command the most attention following a season in which he hit .302 with 28 homers and a league-leading 119 runs batted in.

Zisk, Gossage, Torrez and Bostock also figure to create a bidding war. Zisk, an outfielder, hit .290 with 30 homers and 101 RBI for the White Sox; Gossage was the mainstay of the Pittsburgh Pirates' bullpen with a 1.62 ERA and 26 saves; Torrez won 17 games and posted two complete game victories in the World Series for the Yankees and Bostock hit .336 and drove in 90 runs for the Twins.

How players become free agents

NEW YORK (UPI) — How does a major league baseball player become a free agent?

This year there are four ways to make the free agent list.

- A player becomes a free agent if he played out the renewal year of his contract during the 1977 season.
- A player becomes a free agent if he has six or more years of major league service and signed a contract on or after Aug. 9, 1976, and has not signed for 1978.
- A player becomes a free agent if he signed a major league contract for 1976 but was outrighted to the minor leagues in 1977.
- A player becomes a free agent if he reaches an agreement to do so with his club.

High school football season ends

Next games tell teams' future

by VIC NOVAK

The possibilities are fascinating.

Everything comes down to this final weekend of regular-season play in high school football.

A full schedule of games represents different but crucial tests for area schools.

A VICTORY FOR Prospect or Fremd could mean an "at-large" invitation to the state football playoffs starting Wednesday. St. Viator could grab a share of the Suburban Catholic Conference crown if the cards fall right or may still qualify for an "at-large" position.

For Elk Grove and Barrington, this last regular weekend of the 1977 season is a way to stay sharp for the playoffs.

Both automatically earned their playoff berths by winning Mid-Suburban League divisional titles two weeks ago.

"At-large" invitations will be issued to independents, conference co-champions not selected as their league's official playoff representative and conference runners-up with an 80 per cent or better winning percentage (all teams with 8-1 final records).

Only three "at-large" teams will receive invitations. Prospect, Fremd and St. Viator face must-win situations because seven other squads, including St. Laurence, Brother Rice, Fenwick, Evanston, Elgin, Glenbrook South and Oak Park, may be eligible, too.

THE ILLINOIS High School Assn. uses a point system for solving such riddles. A victory against a team with an over-all winning record is 24 points, and a triumph against a team with an over-all losing ledger is eight.

It originally was feared that victories by Prospect, Fremd, Evanston, Oak Park and Fenwick could result in a five-way tie, with all teams having 118 points each. The only way to resolve such a mess is through coin flips.

However, a victory for Prospect over host Forest View tonight would give the Knights 120 rather than 118 points and an automatic, "at-large" invitation. The Falcons, though, (5-3) will be anything but an automatic victim in this South Division matchup.

Who will advance to state football tourney?

There are a number of similarities between the teams. The contest is the oldest rivalry in the Mid-Suburban League. Prospect and Forest View are the only charter members still in the conference. Forest View head coach Fred Lussow attended Prospect while Prospect assistant coach Darrell Phillips is a former Forest View coach.

THE KEY TO the game is passing. Each has capable quarterbacks in Prospect's Andy Loos and Forest View's Jeff Nelson.

Each displays a strong pass defense. In seven games, the Knights have allowed only 227 yards through the air and Forest View 328.

Fremd's clash is against host Hersey (2-6) that will be out of the state playoffs for the first time since 1974. Fremd (7-1) is enjoying its best year ever.

The Huskies of Hersey must stop Fremd's Kevin Weaver. The 5-foot-10, 180-pound senior running back needs only 14 more yards to reach the magic 1,000-yard rushing mark. Weaver has rushed for 986 yards in 186 carries.

St. Viator's chances for a state playoff berth are far less than those of Prospect and Fremd.

THE LIONS (7-1) will have only 86 points even if they beat Marist (1-7) in an East Suburban Catholic League contest Saturday. The Lions must win and hope that Holy Cross beats St. Patrick Friday night.

All three teams (Viator, Pats and Holy Cross) would have identical 5-1 league records and chances are that the league would send Viator, with its over-all 8-1 record, to represent the Suburban Catholic Conference in the playoffs. Cross and Pats each would be 5-4 over-all.

Other contests tonight include MSL North Division battles between Barrington at Arlington and Palatine at Wheeling, a MSL South Division clash with Schaumburg at Rolling Meadows, a crossover contest with Buffalo Grove visiting Elk Grove, and a Central Suburban League South Division game with Maine West hosting Maine East.

The only other Saturday game is Conant at Hoffman Estates in a MSL South Division battle.

BARRINGTON (8-0), in only its first MSL season, is the second best passing team in league history.

The No. 1 team is Arlington. In 1966, Arlington averaged 188.7 passing yards per game. In 1977, Barrington has passed for 166.4 yards per contest.

Elk Grove (7-1) could achieve another possible milestone against Buffalo Grove (2-6). If Elk Grove can rush for 270 yards, the Grenadiers will make the top 10, all-time MSL running teams.

Wheeling could attain its best record since 1968 with a victory over Palatine (2-6). Under Jerry Clinnen, the Wildcats are 2-3 in league play and 5-3 over-all.

Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows both are 1-4 in conference action. Over-all, Rolling Meadows sports the better over-all record, 3-5 to Schaumburg's 1-7.

Hoffman's game against Conant is the Hawks' last chance to achieve a victory this season. The Hawks of Hoffman Estates are 0-5 in MSL South play and 0-7 over-all.

Conant's Cougars display a 2-3 league mark and a 5-3 over-all record. The Cougars have yielded only 28.8 yards against the pass, making them the third best MSL team.

Maine West, (2-6) which has lost four starters for the season, will need all the luck it can find against a Maine East team considered the best (8-0) in the school's history. East's undefeated record is its first since 1959.

Statistics — the numbers you can't always count on

Bob Frisk

Sports Editor

Every football game is subject to a cold and ceaseless accounting.

Statistics.

Most successful statisticians are in love with their work. A statistic isn't just a cold number, it's a little story.

It's always rather amusing to hear anyone mutter something about how statistics are for losers. A favorite line is: "The only statistics that matter are the wins and losses."

YOU CAN ACCEPT that from a coach. He's being sincere. Can you really buy that from the player? They may pretend they don't care but they do. You can be certain of that.

Sure the player cares about winning and losing, but he's still interested in those statistics. The stats that "don't mean anything" have a strange way of becoming very important during contract talks — on both sides of the table. The basic things you must remember about the football statistics you read in any paper every week are (1) they're not entirely accurate and (2) they are not as meaningful as they could be.

Statistics are not accurate because there is a human element involved. Mistakes do happen. Often.

YOU MIGHT have two running backs or two receivers with similar-looking numbers. Players seldom notice mistakes and even if they do, they rarely do anything about it.

Football statistics can be quite meaningless. If you lose sight of what they really are, and how they operate, you can be led into marvelously logical-sounding nonsense.

Statistics merely count what has already happened; they say nothing about why.

"Meaningful" statistics are those that give you an insight into a player's contributions in the game, or his worth at his position.

"IT'S EASY TO LOOK at Walter Payton's 200-plus yards rushing Sunday in Green Bay and understand his contributions to the Bears. But what about the time Roland Harper might pick up 82 yards on 21 carries for a modest 3.9 average? What does that tell you?

Ten other backs in the NFL that same afternoon might have gained 80 to 90 yards, but if you are told that Harper carried the ball eight times on third-down, short-yardage situations and got the first down on seven of those eight tries, then you've learned something about the kind of day he had.

When a Bears' defensive lineman rushes the passer and chases him into the arms of someone else, only the tackler will get mentioned on the official statistics. Actually it was the rusher who did the work.

Two Punters might have the same average — say 41 yards per kick — but one might have had his punts returned for 10 yards all day, and the other for 100. You'll never know by checking the punter's record in the paper.

PEOPLE WILL insist that a quarterback's record of how many third downs he turns into first downs is the real tip-off on his ability. They talk about 50 per cent as the desired figure.

Right, and $100,000 a year is the desired income, too, but few of us reach it.

Some quarterbacks will kill the defense on first and second down, and they could run up a one-sided advantage without cashing a single third down.

A passer's statistics don't tell you what he did in the final two minutes of each half, or what the score was when he got the bulk of his yardage.

A 50-YARD PASS play for a touchdown is still 50 yards in the statistics, whether Bob Avellini laid a perfect 50-yarder into someone's hands, or whether he tossed a little safety valve pass and the receiver shook off four tacklers and gained 50 with some "Red" Grange moves.

Statistics are a matter of intense indifference, if not irritation, to the non-fan. Any casual observer of a newspaper's sports section may be turned off by the statistics that occupy so much space and are packaged under a "scoreboard" label.

To the sports-bitten the statistics are informative, pictoral and gossipy.

The sports addict, aided by experience and memory, is able to extract the same joy from the statistics that must prickle the scalp of the musician when he glances down at a page of his score and actually hears bassos and sopranos, woodwinds and violins.

Statistics are like love; you're either hooked or you're not.

In this business it helps to be hooked.

College friends ready for battle on the field Sunday

by GARY TAYLOR

Houston Oilers linebacker Robert Brazile says that if his meeting with Walter Payton Sunday is anything like practice at Jackson State University, wear a seat belt.

"I tried to knock his head off then and I don't see why that will change," said the 6-4, 240-pound Brazile. "We were best of friends off the field but we went at each other in practice."

The rivalry between the two multi-talented athletes appears to have paid off because Brazile, 24, is an all-pro linebacker with the Oilers and Payton, 23, is an all-pro who leads all NFL ballcarriers this season with 858 yards.

THE THIRD YEAR pros meet for the first time in NFL regular season action Sunday, but their memories of practice at Jackson State are still sharp.

"If I didn't hit him hard, Walter would ask me what was the matter," Brazile said.

According to the 5-11, 204-pound Payton, "If he did anything less than try to knock me crazy, I would think less of him."

Their matchup is an exciting aspect of the Oilers-Bears game which pairs two teams with 3-4 records and dim playoff hopes.

"OUR OFFENSIVE game plan will determine how many times we come together," Payton said. Brazile plays the right outside linebacker, and most opposing offenses run toward the Oilers' left flank.

Payton's success in adding to his rushing total will be a factor also. Many times the fast Brazile roams across the field to capture a sprung ballcarrier.

Brazile's 75 tackles and unassisted tackles in seven games is second on the club to left inside linebacker Gregg Bingham.

Since Brazile became a starter his rookie season (1975) the Oilers defense has handled many of the best running backs in the game. They limited O. J. Simpson to 38 yards in 16 carries in the second game of the 1976 season. They bottled up Otis Armstrong to 47 yards on 12 carries that same year. Franco Harris rushed 37 yards on 10 carries in a late 1976 meeting.

PAYTON, ON THE other hand, gained 117 yards in the first quarter against Green Bay last Sunday and tied the Bears single game rushing record of 205 yards despite sitting out most of the fourth quarter.

Payton and Brazile both came out of Jackson State at the same time. Payton was the fourth player taken in the spring 1975 draft and Brazile was the sixth.

BEAR FACTS: Rookie Free agent Fred Dean, cut by the Dolphins on the final preseason cut this year, was in camp for a tryout Thursday but coach Jack Pardee said he would bring in some more hopefuls before making a decision. "We have a linebacker coming in tomorrow (Friday)," Pardee said. "We're looking for some players who can help us and special teams players also." The Bears can sign two players for the two-man inactive list.

Dean, 6-3, 250 pounds, was a three-year starter at Texas Southern University.

Greg Johnson, a free agent defensive end signed by the Bears last week will be activated for this week's game in Houston. Johnson, who has also played at defensive tackle, will play exclusively at end, Pardee said. Jerry Meyers and Jeff Sevy will be used both at end and tackle in reserve on defense.

Payton only ties rushing record

Waletr Payton will have to settle for a tie with Gale Sayers for the Bears' individual game rushing record.

Payton tied Sayers' 9-year-old mark Sunday with a 205-yard outing against the Packers, despite sitting out most of the fourth quarter. But the Bears appealed to league headquarters that Payton was only given one yard gained on a play early in the game where he should have been credited with two.

But the firm that handles the official statistics for the NFL said its findings were "inconclusive," after a review of the game films and that Payton will still be credited with 205 yards, rather than 206.

SILK STOCKINGS, with trainer-driver Preston Burris, Jr., in the sulky, works out on Arlington's track in preparation for her appearance Saturday night in the $25,000 Miss Single Star Pace.

Hawthorne race off—vet cites drug use

Hawthorne Park officials canceled a Trifecta race Wednesday on a tip from a trainer that two horses had been tranquilized.

"You could tell by looking at the horses that they were tranquilized. A tranquilizer acts as a depressant," said Ron Jensen, state veterinarian.

State steward Linus Pierce said he was approached at mid-afternoon by a trainer, whom he would not identify, with information that Sturdy Steel, listed as a 5-2 program favorite, and Flashy Fritz, 3-1, the No. 2 pick on the program, had been drugged.

Pierce said track security personnel were looking for a person seen near the horses' barns.

"We've got a real good start on this investigation. I believe we are close to breaking it," he said.

Other horses in the $7,800 claiming race, on which trifecta wagering was open, were scheduled to undergo testing to determine if they had been tampered with. In some horses, signs of tranquilization do not appear for 24 hours.

Sturdy Steel is trained by Geraldine Namen and owned by Robert Namen and Walter von Sydow. Flashy Fritz is trained by Richard Hazelton and owned by L. E. Corrington Jr.

Jerry Lad seeks second Arlington win

Jerry Lad, driven and trained by Daryl Busse, will seek his second straight triumph and his third of the current Arlington Park Race Track meet when he goes postward with eight opponents in tonight's featured $5,400 Worthy Blend Trot.

The 7-year-old gelding put together a big stretch move last time out (:29 last quarter) to complete the mile and one eighth in 2:21-1. That was Jerry Lad's fourth win of the campaign and boosted his earnings to $21,605.

He will not have an easy time adding to the victory column tonight with the likes of Pat Ti Wty, Midnight Comet, Pason Torpedo and Big Demon entered in the hunt.

Pat Ti Way turned in an unusually poor effort in her most recent try, but the front-stepping, 6-year-old mare, who owns a 2:02-4 clocking at Sportsman's and earnings of $20,000-plus in 1977, figures to be in contention throughout.

Midnight Comet is a verstile 4-year-old colt who has a half doen wins this year. Tack on seven seconds, two thirds and a bankroll of nearly $25,000. He has raced well at Arlington, finishing second twice behind Freshayr.

Pason Torpedo is no stranger to the winner's circle. He has landed in it eight times this year. His best winning effort was a trip in 2:02-2 at Sportsman's. A victory here would shove his 1977 earnings over the $40,000 mark.

Big Demon has been postward 29 times this season and has returned with nine triumphs and earnings of $31,059.

Speed, passing new to Buckeye football strategy

Loren Tate

So you think you know Woody Hayes, huh? Three yards and a mass of mud! Huge Pete Johnson breaking bones for 26 touchdowns one year and 19 the next!

Well, take another look. Change his nickname to Wily. The gray-haired eccentric has a few tricks up his sleeve yet.

The tipoff came last Jan. 1. The Buckeyes were making their first Orange Bowl appearance against Colorado and were trailing 10-0 late in the first quarter. Too early to panic, right. But here was Hayes removing the young giant, Johnson, who had scored touchdowns at a faster rate than anyone in 1975 and 1976.

HAYES INSERTED swift sophomore Rod Gerald at quarterback, junior college transfer Ron Springs at tailback and moved stocky tailback Jeff Logan to fullback. In two plays OSU had a touchdown, Logan erupting out of the FB slot for 36 yards and the score . . . igniting a runaway 27-10 triumph that salvaged the diminishing Big Ten image in post-season play.

With that triumph, Woody made a commitment to speed over brute strength. And while injuries have prevented his Pony Backfield from taking up where it left off in Miami — they're just now rounding into form for Illinois Saturday — speed is definitely the new Buckeye trademark.

Last Saturday somthing else happened. On first down against Wisconsin, with the wind in his face, Gerald unleashed a long bomb that missed connecting by an eyelash. The old reminder: "Don't come up too fast in that Badger secondary."

Then, lo and behold, on second down Gerald did it again . . . and this time senior Jim Harrell ran under it en route to a 79-yard touchdown play. Ohio State 7, Wisconsin 0! Just like that. It went from there to 42-0, fifth in a string of Big Ten runaways by such margins as 38-7, 46-0, 27-6 and 35-15.

PASSING IS now very much a part of Hayes' speed-oriented, big play attack. Gerald has 42 completions (out of 71), matching the number he and departed Jim Pacenta hit in 12 games last season. Gerald has thrown six interceptions, but the fleet Buckeye defense has more htan compensated with the incredible number of 21 steals in eight games.

In discussing the subject, Woody likes to lull opponents to sleep.

"I don't know why we're throwing more," he says with tongue in cheek. "I'll have to take that up with George Chaump (assistant coach). I think he's overdoing it a little bit. We'll have to have a conference."

Then, more seriously, Hayes points out:

"Actually, Rod has gotten better as a passer; we've improved our protection, and our receivers are better. But we still try to make a living running the football because I think that's the best way to do it."

So Woody has the best of two worlds. He can take pride in another young ground-pounder, freshman fullback Joel Payton, who has 11 TDs. But long OSU strikes have decreased the number of close-in opportunities for Payton. Springs has a long gain of 72; Logan, just now recovered from an ankle injury, boasts a 63-yarder; Gerald popped a high run of 44, and there have been frequent jaunts over 20.

The Illini defense, battered by Michigan State 49-20 last weekend, faces up to the fact that these Buckeyes are dangerous from any spot on the field. Woody has learned to use his speed, a sharp turnaround from 1973 when Morris Bradshaw, now an Oakland Raider receiver, was a senior on a Buckeye team whose leading receiver caught nine passes all year.

Network plays dumb on Connors charge

WASHINGTON — Denying they had played a game of "bait and switch," top spokesmen for the Columbia Broadcasting System Thursday said they did not know Jimmy Connors had been guaranteed $500,000 in one of four "Heavyweight Championship of Tennis" series.

They said they believed for two years — until May 7 — the series was as advertised and they tried not to give the wrong impression when "winner take all" was mentioned in advertising and promotion. They acknowledged they were "sloppy" in not doing so soon enough.

"None of us at CBS is proud of our record in this thing," said Robert Wussler, CBS Sports president and former president of the TV network. "I am personally embarrassed by the errors of omission."

Wussler and other CBS executives appeared before the House Subcommittee on Communications, studying television networks and sporting events. Earlier, the subcommittee finished questioning of ABC officials in connection with wrongly ranked boxers, and on ABC actions concerning college football games.

Questioning of the CBS spokesmen centered on the phrase "winner take all," used in promoting the "heavyweight" series in which Connors, who has been the No. 1 men's tennis player, played four matches over two years.

Young-Palermo connection denied

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Is Jimmy Young manipulated by former Philadelphia boxing racketeer Frank "Blinky" Palermo or is he the unfortunate victim of another low blow in the infighting between rival promoters?

Young, the No. 2 contender who meets top-ranked Ken Norton in Las Vegas Saturday night in a $3 million, 15 round fight, was linked to Palermo Thursday in several newspaper articles, all of which referred to the alleged connection as "whispered" or "rumored."

Young's manager, Jack Levin, admits knowing Palermo, who was released from federal prison six years ago ago after serving half of a 15-year sentence for conspiracy and extortion in a case involving the management of world welterweight champion Don Jordan. Levin says the 60-year-old Palermo has often stopped at his $10 million a year electrical supply warehouse in Philadelphia to buy equipment and chat.

"Sure I know him," Levin said. "I don't know what kind of man he used to be, but he seems a nice old man. We talk about boxing sometimes because I like to talk to everyone and I know he knows about boxing. I ask him for advice.

"But no way does he have even a single dollar invested in Jimmy Young. And he doesn't call any shots."

No scorecards for Saturday fight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Home television viewers will not be able to see the officials' scorecards Saturday night during the 15-round fight beteen top heavyweight contenders Ken Norton and Jimmy Young.

ABC-TV, which is nationally televising the 2½-hour program at prime time, decided not to employ the controversial gimmick which was used on NBC's Sept. 29 broadcast of the Muhammad Ali-Earnie Shavers championship fight in New York.

Ali's corner had a runner relay the official cards from a TV in the dressing room during the bout while Shavers' corner missed the ploy. Shavers claimed later it may have played a part in his loss.

Contract ready for Oakland shift

NEW ORLEANS — A banker said Thursday a contract had been drawn up for Charlie Finley to sell the Oakland A's to a group seeking to move the American League baseball team to the Louisiana Superdome.

Bob Thompson, one of the men working to complete the sale, said the contract would be submitted to Finley either Friday or Monday. He said negotiations were nearly complete and the final sales figure would be close to $12 million.

Officials in Oakland, however, said Finley was bound by an "ironclad contract" to keep the A's in California another 10 years.

William Cunningham, general manager of the Oakland Alameda County Coliseum, said the contract gave stadium officials the right to go to court to stop the sale and transfer of the A's.

"(Under) the contract (the team) cannot be sold to anyone without approval of the coliseum and the A's (can) do nothing to cause the right for the team to play in Oakland to be lost to another city," said Cunningham.

Louis stable after vessel surgery

HOUSTON — Former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis Thursday underwent surgery for a ballooned blood vessel at Methodist Hospital and was said to be in stable condition.

Dr. Michael E. DeBakey performed the repair of a "dissecting aneurysm of a descending thoracic aorta" on Louis, 63, the "Brown Bomber" of the 1930s and 1940s.

"He tolerated the operation well," a hospital spokesman said. "His condition is stable. He is resting comfortably."

Louis was admitted to Methodist at 2 a.m. Saturday after a flight from Las Vegas, where he spent eight days hospitalized in intensive coronary care after suffering chest pains.

Chicken kicker avoids legal woes

DES MOINES, Iowa — Because of a loophole in the Iowa Code, the state is powerless to prosecute a high school football coach who allowed his team to kick a gold-painted chicken symbolizing a gridiron rival, a state official said Thursday.

Attorney General Richard C. Turner was asked by the American Humane Association to investigate the chicken-kicking incident to see if Dubuque Hempstead High School Coach Robert Timmerman could be prosecuted for his action.

The chicken had to be destroyed after the incident, which Timmerman sail he staged to inspire his team for a game with arch-rival Dubuque Wahlert.

Turner said the Iowa Code has a section that prohibits cruelty to animals, but that nowhere in the code is the word animal defined. He said there are references to cattle, horses, dogs, sheep and hogs, but nothing about chickens.

Timmerman has apologized for the incident, saying he used bad judgement. Timmerman probably wouldn't have used the gimmick again anyway.

His team lost the game to Wahlert, 7-0.

Meyer scores with Gren coach

by KEITH REINHARD

Don Schnake would never admit it, but Jim Meyer is a player after his own heart.

Schnake is the Elk Grove football coach and Meyer is his premier veteran running back. In two seasons Meyer has rushed for over 1500 yards and scored nearly 150 points.

This last weekend the rugged 190-pound senior notched two more touchdowns while helping the Grenadiers stop Hoffman Estates 35-7 and he has not moved into a tie for the lead in area scoring.

"Jim's a quiet type," offered Schnake, not particulrly noted himself for an abundance of verbalizing. "He doesn't say much and he isn't one of those rah-rah types. When the players are all packed together before a game, jumping up and down, chanting and getting revved up, you can usually find Jim sitting on the bench tying his shoe."

If Meyer is passive off the field, he surely makes up for it on the grid iron. His 686 yards already garnered in conference games this fall ranks him tenth best on the MSL single-season rushing honor roll and he is only the 13th in loop history to ever churn up over 1,000 during a varsity career.

Jim is currently third in area rushing this season with 768 yards.

The opposition might hardly think of Meyer as deceptive, but Schnake thinks of him that way: "He's a Jim Brown type. It looks like he can hardly make it back to the huddle after a play and then wham, when the ball is snapped, he explodes into action. He certainly doesn't waste any motion though."

Does he have any other interests? "As far as I know, his only interests are playing football and deer hunting," reported the Gren skipper, also an avid hunter and outdoorsman not really prone to wasted motion.

Smiled Schnake when asked about his own hunting: "Yeah, I'm a bargain hunter."

The Elk Grove coach certainly picked up a bargain when Jim Meyer put down his gun and picked up a football.

Milton Richman

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Steinbrenner still was sound asleep when the phone in his home rang early Wednesday morning.

He had been in Boston the night before at a get-together in which Carl Yastrzemski was roasted for the benefit of the Jimmy Fund, which aids afflicted youngsters, and hand't gotten home until 2 a.m.

Now only a few hours later, he wondered who it could be waking him up and it turned out to be one of his employes, Reggie Jackson.

"Can you have breakfast with me?" his $2.9 million outfielder asked him.

"YOU MEAN TO say you got me up just to ask me that? Steinbrenner said, looking at the clock near his bed and trying to shake some of the sleep out of his head at teh same time.

"There's something I want to see you about and it's important," Jackson said. "I'd like you to have breakfast with me. There's a nice little Greek coffee shop at 79th Street and Madison Avenue where we won't be bothered and we'll have some privacy. Could you meet me there, say, in about an hour?"

The Yankees' principal owner said OK, he'd be there. When Steinbrenner got to the place, Jackson picked out one of the tables in the back and the two men talked generalities for a while. During the course of the conversation, Jackson opened a box he had brought containing a magnificent glass statuette which had been presented to him, along with a new automobile, by Sport Magazine a week-and-a-half-ago.

Underneath the rich looking piece of glass sculpture was inscribed why Jackson had been given it — for being chosen the Most Valuable Player in the 1977 World Series.

"I'D LIKE YOU TO have this," Jackson said. "From me to you."

George Steinbrenner was so touched, he didn't know what to say. He knew what the award meant to Jackson. Knowing that, he declined to accept it.

"I'd prefer you give it to your Mom or Dad," he said. "If you want to have a replica made and then give that to me, I'd appreciate it just as much. The important thing to me is the thought."

Later, Jackson's gesture still was on Steinbrenner's mind.

"It wasn't done for show," he said. "There weren't a million people around in this little coffee shop, just him and me. That gives you an insight as to what kind of human being Reggie Jackson is."

WITH THIS YEAR'S free agent draft coming up Friday, people still keep asking George Steinbrenner about last year's draft from which the Yankees originally selected Jackson. Specifically, they ask him whether he feels Jackson was worth the $2.9 million, and would he do the same thing all over again.

"I'd do it again, every day of the year," Steinbrenner said. "I'll put it this way: if I had to pick out an MVP on the Yankees, day in and day out, it would be Thurman Munson. Go down the list and you won't find anyone more valuable to his team that Munson was to us. Maybe you'll find someone who was equally valuable, like Carl Yastrzemski or Rod Carew, but not more so.

"If I had to name the MVP for the playoffs and the World Series, it would be between Lou Piniella and Sparky Lyle. That's not taking anything away from any of our other players.

"But when people ask me whether Reggie Jackson was worth all that money and what it was we expected in return, I tell them, we would've liked him to hit 30 homers, and he hit 32; we wanted him to drive in 100 runs, and he drove in 110, and we would've liked him to have 20 game-winning hits, and he had 21.

"Most of all," Steinbrenner said, "we would've wished him to be one of our biggest contributors when we needed it most. During August and September when we did need it most, he was.

FORGET WHAT he did in the playoffs and the World Series. Reggie Jackson's greatest contribution this year weren't those five homers in the World Series. His greatest contribution came in August and September when we were trailing the Red Sox and Orioles and then had to beat them head-to-head."

In Friday's free agent draft, the Yankees could lose five players — Mike Torrez, who wrapped up the World Series for them in the final game with the Dodgers; big Dave Kingman, Ron Blomberg, Gene Locklear and Elrod Hendricks.

The one they don't want to lose is Torrez, although they might. They're likely to bid for some other free agents.

"We're not going into the free agent market with any sense of fiscal irresponsibility, and we didn't do it last year, either," Steinbrenner said. "If we fell we can strengthen ourselves and make the Yankees a more competitive ball club than they are today, then and only then, will we enter the free agent market."

Bucks lose to Cleveland; Bulls back in 1st place

From Daily Herald wire services

The Milwaukee Bucks dropped a nine-point decision to Cleveland Thursday night, allowing the idle Chicago Bulls to slip back into first place in the Midwest Division of the National Basketball Assn.

Bobby Smith poured in 24 points, including 14 in a 36-point third period when the Cleveland Cavaliers ran their winning streak to four games with a 100-91 win over the Bucks.

IN OTHER NBA games Thursday Phoenix dumped San Antonio and Houston nipped Golden State.

After playing the Bucks to a 45-45 first half deadlock, the Cavs hit on 6-of-9 from the field in the first four minutes of the third period to open up a 59-50 lead and took an 81-64 advantage into the final period.

Brian Winters, who hit on only 1-of-11 field shots in the first three quarters, sparked a fourth-period Milwaukee rally by scoring eight points as the Bucks closed to 92-87 with 3:10 left.

NBA report

TWO BASKETS by Elmore Smith and goals by Walt Frazier and Bobby Smith offset baskets by Quinn Buckner and Dave Myers of the Bucks in the final three minutes.

Frazier had 16 points and Jim Brewer 14 for the Cavs, while rookie Marques Johnson, who was held scoreless in the final quarter, led Milwaukee with 20 points.

Rookie Walter Davis pumped in 24 points and a tenacious Phoenix defense forced a team record 40 turnovers in a 110-89 victory by the Suns over the San Antonio Spurs.

DAVIS ALSO led his team with 13 rebounds and five assists.

The Suns took the lead on their first possession and ran up a 29-18 first quarter lead. The Spurs, hitting a chilly 35 of 83 shots, never came closer than five points after that and dropped behind by 34 points three times in the final period.

Phoenix led in all statistics, controlling the boards 56-49 and stealing the ball 18 times from the Spurs. The Suns upped their record 4-3. Don Buse backed Davis with 19 points and seven steals and four other Suns scored in double figures.

George Gervin, who is the NBA's fourth leading scorer with 28.0 average, led San Antonio with 17 points.

Moses Malone scored six points and pulled down six rebounds in the five-minute overtime session to lead the Rockets to a 113-111 victory over the Golden State Warriors.

Rick Barry, who scored a game-high 34 ponts, missed on a shot with three seconds left in overtime which would have tied the game. Barry had tied the score at 105-105 at the buzzer in regulation play with a corner jump shot.

Sabres top Bruins 4-1; Flyers win

NHL report

The French Connection line of Gilles Perreault, Rick Martin and Rene Robert accounted for three goals and three assists Thursday night to spark the Buffalo Sabres to a 4-1 win over the Boston Bruins.

In another NFL game Philadelphia also won 4-1, over Washington.

After a tame first period with no scoring, Martin opened the scoring with a power play goal, his third of the season, at 11:16 of the second period.

THE THIRD PERIOD belonged to Perreault. At 13:10 he slapped home his second goal of the season from the left face-off circle, and, less than six minutes later, connected again after taking a pass from Martin.

Deflected goals by Bob Kelly, Bill Barber and Joe Watson plus a rebound shot by Mel Bridgman helped the Flyers defeat the Capitals, 4-1, and tie the idle New York Islanders for first place of the NHL Patrick Division.

The Flyers outshot the Capitals by 34-16 and held them to one shot in the second period.

The Flyers built a 2-0 lead in the first period when Kelly deflected the puck off goaltender Bernie Wolfe at 4:01 and Barber pounded the puck off Wolfe at 19:38.

The game was Wolfe's first loss of the season giving him a 1-1-1 record while Flyers' goalie Bernie Parent upped his record to 4-1-1.

Plante enjoys new outlook as part of Black Hawks

Rick Christopher
Byline report

It's a different look for the Black Hawks' newest member, Pierre Plante, but so far, the right-winger likes what he sees.

Penalty killing was an unknown part of Plante's hockey game during his five seasons with the St. Louis Blues. And last season, Plante rarely played at all, collecting only 38 points on 18 goals.

He has a career high of 34 goals scored during the 1974-75 season and has accumulated 105 goals and 115 assists in his seven-year stint in the National Hockey League.

PLANTE WAS drafted by Philadelphia in 1971 before being traded to the Blues along with Brent Hughes for Andre Dupont.

Pierre Plante

"I have an excellent chance of breaking 34 but I also think I can be a much more valuable player for the Black Hawks in other ways too," Plante said. Through the first nine games Plante has collected four goals. Two were game winners.

Bob Pulford's first acquisition as general manager and coach was the 26-year-old Plante. The Black Hawks sent Dick Redmond to the Blues in the exchange.

Pulford immediately threw the 187-pound winger into penalty killing duties with John Marks.

"FOUR GUYS AGAINST five out there," Plante said. "It's great. You're right there with all the action with a feeling that you really belong."

"Pierre has the tools to be a fine penalty killer. He carries the puck well, he can skate, and he's clever with the stick," Pulford said.

"Both he and John have been playing well together more so on penalty killing than anything else.

"We've finally started to go as a team when we're one man short," Pulford added. "When you play and think as a team and have mistakes your effort will cover up."

The Black Hawks persistent mistakes have resulted from excessive forechecking and body contact. Both facets of the game eluded the Chicago contingent in recent years.

Under Pulford's reign, the Hawks have slowly gained the respect of other teams by throwing their weight around.

THE HAWKS are making contact after the pass or shot when the opposition is most vulnerable. They are knocking them out of the play rather than down on the ice.

At times, however, the Black Hawks' eagerness has hurt as they currently find themselves third in the NHL in penalty minutes.

"Most of the penalties have been whistled because of our aggressiveness," Plante said. "We've had too much. We make the good hit but carry out too far.

"With a little more experience and discipline through the year, we won't have as many penalties.

THE NEW atmosphere in Chicago this season was what Plante needed. Sporadic play with the Blues caused the bachelor from Quebec to acquire a few bad habits.

"When I did get in I tried too hard to score goals," Plante admits. "I wandered too much.

"Coming to Chicago has got to help. It's like beginning a new career. People have made me feel at home and part of the team.

I didn't have that in St. Louis," Plante added.

Nor did he have any penalty-killing assignments. "I just love the work."

Soccer no longer kicks out girls

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Madeleine Russell is pushed and shoved every day by boys at school. As the first and only girl on the soccer team, she expects it.

In a few weeks, the 16-year-old junior seems to have won the respect of her teammates and coach Jim Farrier at Towson High School in suburban Baltimore.

"She's taken her lumps from time to time, but she always gets up and keeps fighting," Farrier said. "She's a good soccer player."

GETTING ON the 20-member team was the big problem. When Miss Russell showed up for tryouts last year, she was told girls were not allowed to participate in boys' contact sports in Maryland.

"I was disappointed," she said. "I'd played all the other years (on boys' teams) since sixth grade."

The American Civil liberties union was ready to go to bat for her. Then, this year the State Board of Education opened up men's contact sports to girls.

Miss Russell was in the bleachers to hear Farrier's opening season speech at fall tryouts. It began typically enough.

"We're looking for soccer players who are versatile, who can use both feet," Farrier said. "We're not anxious to cut anyone." Then the speech took a different turn.

"I'M SURE ALL of you are aware, now that we're under the influence of Title IX, that girls are allowed to come out for boys' sports," Farrier said. "In case you haven't noticed, we have a girl here today, Maddy Russell.

"Maddy was out with us last year, and she's out with us again this year."

Farrier said she did well at tryouts and is playing as well as the boys of the junior varsity squad.

She plays the striker position that involves quite a bit of physical contact. Farrier said injuries are not unexpected.

"There are some pretty big bodies out there," he said. "But anyone who goes out for the sport knows that, and Maddy's no rookie."

FARRIER SAID boy teammates accept her as an equal and have shown no animosity:

"I think it's because she plays the game pretty well."

Miss Russell agreed:

"They kid around, but it's never mean. I never feel left out."

Farrier said separate locker room facilities are no problem because the team changes for its out-of-town games before leaving Towson.

"She has her own locker facilities here," he said.

Other teams may be surprised to see a girl player, but so far, Farrier has noticed no adverse reaction.

"I hope there will be no reaction," he said. "I expect people to react, but it puts a lot of pressure on the person involved. But I think she expects it.

"SHE'S BEEN going through it five to six years. It's nothing new to her."

Farrier said he has tried to "keep a low profile."

"I try not to get involved in arguments. I let her soccer playing ability speak for itself."

Harper offense fails in last game

by DON FRISKE

For the entire Harper football season, which ended Thursday night with a 28-21 road loss to the Wright Rams, the Hawk offense has taken a lot of verbal abuse.

And it wasn't entirely unjustified.

Time after time, the Hawks drove deep into opposing territory. Or they got the ball on a turnover. That was all good, but the failure to capitalize with a touchdown much of the time was a real nagging problem for the coaches and players.

THIS LENGTHY introduction should tell you that it happened to the Hawks one last time in 1977 when a drive fell short at the Wright 7-yard line late in the game.

Harper took over at their own 35 after Ben Gray had scored the winning touchdown on an 8-yard run off left tackle. It capped an 85-yard drive that opened with a 33-yard pass play.

The Hawks quickly moved over the midfield strip with a series of short gainers before Neil Schmidt completed a 31-yard pass to Mike Cusack. That put the ball on the Ram 13.

Two 3-yard runs followed to move the Hawks inside the 10, but a pair of incomplete passes halted the threat. Wright ran out the clock and the season, leaving the Hawks with a 5-4 record.

THE SCHMIDT-RUN offense, however, deserves more than a sour remembrance of the final possession of the year. Sure, the last few plays brought back all the bad visions from earlier games, but most of those came when Schmidt was more concerned with catching passes than throwing them.

After quarterbacks Jim Atkinson and Gaydon Brandt were suspended because of training violations with two games left, Schmidt was pressed into action.

So he finished the season as a receiver with 116 yards on eight catches. After a few days of practice at the new position, he was ready to go.

He led the Hawks to a 21-8 victory over Concordia and then bot things rolling in a similar fashion against Wright. Trailing 7-0 after the Rams had driven 79 yards on the opening possession, Schmidt wasted little time in getting the Hawks back in the game.

On six plays, Harper hed tied the score. The big play was a 42-yard touchdown sprint by Brian Getzelman.

THE RAMS seemed unimpressed by the big play as they continued to use the sustained drive as their offensive style. Wright started another series on their own 23 and moved down to the Hawk 19 on 15 plays. But then they decided to go with pass plays and Harper's Shawn Murphy came up with an interception.

That set up the longest run of the game when Mark Bertolani raced 88 yards to give the Hawks a 14-7 lead. Wright tied the score on a 36-yard pass with only 57 seconds left in the first half.

The Rams got good field position early in the third quarter and used it to take a 21-14 advantage on another pass, this time from 17 yards.

Harper tied the score on an 8-yard pass from Schmidt to Rick Wrzala with 11:32 left in the game, but it wasn't enough.

DENISE MAYBACH, left, of Forest View sends a spike over the outstretched arms of Hoffman Estates' Robin Balskis Thursday night. The Falcons won the Mid-Suburban League volleyball match 20-4, 20-12 to halt a two-match losing streak.

Wheeling volleyballers collect win

by JEFF NORDLUND

After a string of four consecutive Mid-Suburban League losses, Wheeling's girls volleyball team finally landed a win — and a convincing one — Thursday night.

Wheeling crunched Palatine 20-14, 20-13, to even its conference mark at 5-5 after once owning a 4-1 mark earlier in the season.

IN OTHER MSL play Thursday, Barrington defeated Arlington 20-9, 20-13; Hersey downed Fremd, 20-13, 20-15; Forest View rolled past Hoffman Estates 20-4, 20-12; Schaumburg dropped Prospect, 20-17, 16-20, 20-11; and Elk Grove edged Conant 20-13, 11-20, 20-3.

In a nonconference match, Morgan Park beat Buffalo Grove 20-18, 20-5.

Nancy Davis and Chris Rathje of Wheeling turned in strong all-around performances, leading the Wildcats over Palatine, 4-7, said Coach Donna Dubbelde.

"Basically, we got it all together tonight," Dubbelde said. "The losing streak was just a mental thing."

Wheeling started briskly in MSL play with four wins in five matches but lost to Buffalo Grove, Hersey, Arlington and Barrington the following four matches.

BARRINGTON (10-0) maintained its leadership of the North Division by defeating Arlington (5-6) in two games. The undefeated Fillies got their best play from Jan Walstrom and Terry Bagley, who were strong both setting and spiking.

Arlington benefitted from some excellent setting by Patti Heyn. Karen Zobel, Judy Satikas, Lori Kessenich, Peri Jackson and Rosie Schumacher also played well for the Cardinals.

Hersey (9-1) rebounded from a sound defeat against Rolling Meadows Tuesday by stopping Fremd (0-10) in two games. Hersey's setting again proved to be it strength, as Nina Frye and Patty Pallas registered high marks in the category.

Debbie Barnd and Linda Mueller took advantage of the good setting passes to lead Hersey in spiking.

AFTER TWO LOSSES last week, Forest View (7-3) bounced back with a two-game victory over Hoffman Estates (1-9) by making a defensive change.

"We didn't pull off the net quickly enough last week, and that leaves the middle court very vulnerable," Forest View coach Denise Huele said. "Against Hoffman, we corrected that."

Schaumburg (5-5) upset Prospect (8-3) with an improved defense.

"The team tried to key its blocking on Prospect's Jeannine Hahn," Schaumburg coach Sheron Niekamp said. "The girls were aggressive, and they played together as a team."

NCAA ruling in Minnesota case due soon

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The National Collegiate Athletic Assn. may reach a decision on the status of the University of Minnesota's men's athletic program and two basketball players by the middle of the month.

William Hunt, NCAA enforcement director, said Wednesday a decision on the indefinite probation of the entire men's athletic program may be made by early next week. A decision on the eligibility of the two players, Mychal Thompson and Dave Winey, may be made by Nov. 14 or 15, he said.

The NCAA placed the athletic program on indefinite probation after the university refused to declare Thompson and Winey ineligible for alleged violations of league rules.

Ten days ago, the university's assembly committee on intercollegiate athletics reversed its earlier stand and declared the players ineligible. The university then asked the NCAA to lift the probation so other men's teams and individuals can participate in post-season competition.

The basketball team already had been on probation for rules violations before the indefinite sanction was imposed. The basketball penalty had been scheduled to be lifted in March.

Tough LSU ground game faces Alabama Saturday

College football

by United Press International

A capacity crowd of 67,720 wildly partisan fans will fill Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge Saturday afternoon for the much-anticipated nationally televised game between Louisiana State University, the No. 1 rushing team in the nation, and Southeastern Conference rival Alabama, ranked No. 2 nationally.

Alabama, with a record of 5-0 in the SEC, 7-1 in the nation and hopes of its sixth conference title in seven years and a trip to the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 2, will have to find a way to stop LSU's ground game in general and Charles Alexander in particular.

Alexander, third in rushing behind Earl Campbell of Texas and Terry Miller of Oklahoma State, is the leading scorer in the nation with an average of 10.6 points per game and 12 touchdowns.

"LSU REALLY has a great offensive football team," said Crimson Tide Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant. "Last week they proved they have something to them when they came back from being 21 points down (to beat Ole Miss, 28-21). A lot of teams would have folded under those circumstances."

LSU is fourth in the SEC, with a division record of 3-1, and 5-2 over-all. The Bengals are one of the most explosive teams in the nation, and have scored as many as 77 points in one game this season, in a shutout victory over Rice.

Led by Alexander, they average 326.6 yards per game on the ground but they proved in last week's come-from-behind victory over Ole Miss they are able to win even when their rushing game is grounded.

"One of the things that concerns us about LSU is that when Ole Miss contained their running game (holding Alexander to 61 yards), they adjusted so well and won it passing," Bryant said. "Frankly, our pass defense hasn't been anything to brag about."

ALABAMA, AN eight-point favorite, holds a 26-10-4 edge in its series with LSU, and has won the last six games. LSU Coach Charley McClendon, a former student of Bryant's who has lost to his mentor 11 out of 13 times, closed the Bengals' practice sessions this week for the first time in his 16 years as LSU head coach.

"We really don't know what to expect from Alabama," McClendon said. "They'll run a variety of formations at you and not just to keep you honest. They've had good success with all their formations, even though the wishbone is their bread and butter. And they will show more defenses than anyone we've played this year. That's always been their history."

Elsewhere in games involving Top Ten teams, No. 1 Texas plays Houston; No. 3 Oklahoma takes on Oklahoma State; No. 4 Ohio State faces Illinois; fifth-ranked Notre Dame goes against Georgia Tech; sixth-ranked Michigan plays Northwestern; seventh-ranked Penn State takes on North Carolina State; eighth-ranked Arkansas faces Baylor; No. 9 Pittsburgh goes against West Virginia; and No. 10 Nebraska plays Missouri.

In a game that will help determine the Pacific-8's entry in the Rose Bowl, No. 18 Stanford goes against conference rival Southern California.

THE TROJANS, who got off to a 4-0 start and earned the No. 1 ranking in the nation, have lost three of their last four games and are unranked. They are 3-1 in conference play, while Stanford, 6-2 over-all, is 4-1. A loss virtually will eliminate USC from a trip to Pasadena.

"We're just trying too hard," said second-year USC Coach John Robinson. "On third down, we're saying, 'God, we've got to come up with the perfect call. We can't screw up.' "

If Southern California defeats Stanford, it's likely the Rose Bowl will be determined on the final day of the season when Stanford plays its traditional season-ending game against California, currently 6-2 and tied for 16th nationally, but just 2-2 in conference play.

9 on girls all-conference tennis

Nine athletes have been named to the Mid Suburban League All-Conference Girls Tennis team.

The group includes Arlington's Kim Broderick, Laura Sanders and Janet Haberkorn; Barrington's Sarah Olson, Tina Stephan and Sue Gregory; Buffalo Grove's Lisa Smart; Hoffman Estates' Kate Swaya, and Prospect's Lisa Young.

Smart, Sanders and Broderick were were automatic selections because they were the league's respective No. 1 singles and No. 1 doubles champions. The other players were chosen by league coaches.

Swaya finished second in the No. 1 singles competition while Stephan and Gregory placed No. 2 in doubles.

Carburetor adjustment may cure stalling

Doyle K. Getter

Your auto and you

Auto Column: Our car is a 1975 Toyota Corolla with automatic transmission. It has 27,000 miles and, for the last 3,000 miles, we have had trouble with stalling, often when stopped for a traffic light and, occasionally, when rounding a corner. Sometimes it vibrates before stalling, other times it just quietly dies.

Tom Beard, Arlington Heights, Ill.

Mr. Beard: Your problem could be caused by one or more of several different things. The idle speed may be set too low and the idle mixture may be set too lean. The carburetor float setting may need adjustment or you might have a leak in the intake manifold.

Auto Column: I have transmission problems with a brand new 1977 Chevrolet Impala. With only 28 miles on it, I found a puddle of transmission fluid under the car. It also took five to 15 seconds for the car to engage in drive or reverse. The dealer had the car for a week, fixed the leak but slow engagement still occurs. The service manager says he has no idea what the problem is. What can I do?

Mr. C. H. T., Lancaster, N.Y.

Mr. C. H. T.: You can insist that the service manager call his Chevrolet zone service manager and ask for assistance from a factory service representative. No one has to accept a shoddy transmission on a new car. Your warranty requires that your transmission be repaired correctly.

Auto Column: What is your opinion of using a quart of diesel No. 2 fuel as a detergent in six quarts of non detergent SAE 30 engine oil? Also the same in 10W-40 oil? And finally, your opinion of using 20W-50 racing oil for street and highway driving?

Ray Holton, Peoria, Ill.

Mr. Holton: Diesel oil used as a detergent in a non detergent oil will not meet manufacturers' specifications as it does not contain sufficient anti-foam or anti-corrosive agents. I can see no harm in using a 20W-50 racing oil if it is marked for "Service SE" but it would be too thick for Peoria winters.

Auto Column: I have a 1977 Mercury Cougar equipped with steel-belted radial tires. On rough roads or driving over a manhole cover, etc., it feels as if it had 50 or 60 pounds of pressure in the tires. I keep the pressure at 26 pounds. What would be causing this trouble?

W. E. Danforth, Ludlow, Mass.

Mr. Danforth: That's strictly radial tires with the Cougar suspension, picking up radial tire harshness in slow around town driving. While the Cougar is only a sporty car, you will find that firm suspension in any sport car.

Auto Column: I own a 1977 two-door LTD II with about 2,500 miles on it. Gas mileage has been about 10 miles per gallon around the city and 12 miles per gallon on a 300 mile highway trip. I use air conditioning most of the time. How soon can I expect decent gas mileage? The dealer just says, "Wait 'till it's broken in."

N. B. Scott, Holly Hill, Fla.

Mr. Scott: A car is generally considered "broken in" at about 5,000 miles and gas mileage should improve slightly until about then. However, air conditioning and other power accessories also affect gas mileage and weather and road conditions, wind and a person's own driving habits affect it even more. A normal driver would almost never match EPA gas mileage figures, which are theoretical estimates and not based on actual driving conditions.

1978 Ford Fairmont four-door sedan.

Fairmont a surprising compact

by DOYLE K. GETTER

Ford's new compact, the recently introduced 1978 Fairmont that replaces the discontinued Maverick in the Ford lineup, is one of the first of a new breed of moderately priced American cars being designed for practical family transportation with good fuel economy and performance.

European in styling — while showing a remarkable family resemblance to Ford's somewhat larger Granada — the Fiarmont has large glass areas for good vision and straightforward lines that evolved from more than 320 hours of wind-tunnel testing to minimize air drag.

Three models are being offered in this introductory year, a two-door and a four-door sedan and a four-door two-seat station wagon.

A 140-CUBIC INCH four-cylinder engine with manual transmission is the standard power plant but the optional 200 cubic inch six cylinder engine with automatic transmission, the combination that powered the four-door sedan I tested, probably will be the most popular power package. A 302 cubic inch V-8 also is available optionally.

The sedans weigh only 2,725 pounds, the station wagon slightly more. All are 193.8 inches long on a 105.5 inch wheelbase.

The one-barrel six cylinder engine in the test car easily handles all that will be required of it. It idles and cruises smoothly and quietly and, while rated at only 85 net horsepower, it will accelerate the car from zero to 50 miles an hour in 9.2 seconds and from 30 to 50 in 5.5 seconds.

I averaged 20.3 miles a gallon in a week of normal city and suburban driving and 25.4 miles a gallon on a 105 mile highway drive at 55 miles an hour.

THE FAIRMONT'S ride and handling are impressive for a car of its size. You can take it through turns at speeds that would have an LTD sliding off the road. Road shocks are adequately damped but the ride still is more firm than soft.

It's the interior of the car that provides the most surprise. Finally, here is a compact in which four or five adults, depending upon their size, can ride comfortably. While not generous unless the front seats are moved a little forward, rear foot and legroom is comfortably adequate.

The trunk is large by compact standards with nearly 17 cubic feet of luggage or package capacity. It has a flat floor with the spare tire stored in a well under the floor.

The base price of the Fairmont four-door sedan is $3,663. The test car was loaded with options, which included the six cylinder engine, automatic transmission, air conditioning, pivoting front vent windows, power steering, power brakes and an AM-FM cassette stereo radio, among other things, raising the list price to $5,972.

"Hi, I'm Rusty Jones. I'm the one new car option you can buy that will actually appreciate in value."

Why? Because I'll still be protecting your new car from rust when it becomes your old car. And everybody knows a rust-free car is worth more at trade-in time.

My guarantee is the best in the business. I'll stay with your new car day and night, winter and summer, no coffee breaks, no vacations...no rust, for as long as you own it.

Local girl Karen Mason is making good in the Chicago nightclub circuit, wowing audiences with her own brand of entertainment.

Karen's one club singer who is not a standard

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

She leans back against the baby grand, black satin slacks glimmering in the spotlight, lips parted in a sultry, hey-guys-get-a-load-of-this smile.

It's time for that nightclub standard, "Feelings," and the young singer is milking her intro for all it's worth.

And here it comes — the Park West lights zoom in, the piano tinkles softly — but wait just a minute. This hammy, off-key version isn't what Barry Manilow had in mind . . .

RELAX, KAREN Mason knows it — and frankly, my dear, she couldn't give a damn.

For when you come right down to it, Karen can't STAND "Feelings," "You Light Up My Life," or most of the other Top 40 hits on the Larry Lujack morning show. The lady used torchy ballads and eclectic musical comedy, not a Marie Osmond repertoire, to propel her from a split level in Arlington Heights to the plush confines of Chicago's Park West cabaret. She idolizes Judy Garland and Barbra Streisand, not Olivia Newton-John. And she's building her reputation as a vocalist with gay audiences, not in straight clubs where all too often you're judged by your body rather than your talent.

Yet this is the same Karen Mason whose manager tagged her "revoltingly suburban" — a woman who battles intense stage fright by making cracks about her hand-hemmed trousers and mother's chicken soup. She's a Sacred Heart of Mary graduate, and at 26 she's still living at home in Arlington Heights, a town she admires for its "slower pace."

A strange cookie?

Undoubtedly. But Karen's eccentric blend of downtown musical tastes, down-home "suburbanness" and genuinely nervous stage demeanor seems to be working. She's moved from a singing hostess job to small club dates to a "smash success" at Park West in less than a year, and she's now pondering the prospect of "interested" record producers and an out-of-state tour.

NOT BAD FOR a frizzy-haired, overweight girl whose high school drama coach told her, "You're too quiet — you've got to learn to speak up." She did — and now, laughs Karen, "He says he doesn't know what he started."

After her one-line debut in a Sacred Heart show, Karen continued to fuel her interest in theater. While majoring in "almost everything" from psychology to biology at the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle, she landed several leading comedy roles in Northwest suburban community theater productions. But after winning a local following with characters like Golda in "Fiddler on the Roof" and Lucy in "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," Karen decided she needed to branch out.

"I was very secure in community theater, but I knew I had to get out of my shell, Karen recalls, tugging at her bluejeans and making faces. "It was easier in theater because I had a character to

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

A review of "Hello Dolly" appears on page 8.

If you're the type who thinks musicals are nothing but saccharin mishmashes of singing waiters, fancy footwork and acting that falls below "legitimate theater" standards, steer clear of McCormick Place's Arie Crown Theater this month.

Not only would you be subjected to "Hello Dolly," the quintessential American musical, but you'd have to contend with Carol Channing — that dizzy blonde with the unshakable conviction that musicals are wonderful and "Hello Dolly" is the greatest show on earth.

If anyone can turn a confirmed cynic into a toe-tapping regular, it's Miss Channing. One injection of her charm and chances are he'd line up for front row seats.

Whether chatting about her health food diet, energetically describing her fourth grade stage fright, or simply flashing that ubiquitous grin, Miss Channing has no problem convincing anyone that Dolly Levi and "Hello Dolly" are irrepressible winners.

DECKED OUT IN a typically Channing pleated sailor dress and scarlet scarf, the original Dolly Levi noted there have been several changes in the production since its debut back in 1963: "When we tried 'Dolly' out on our pre-Broadway tour, people were walking out before 'Hello Dolly,' " Miss Channing recalled.

"It was a three-ring circus then. When we were creating it, we didn't have the perspective. We finally saw that we had to zero in on Dolly's story."

The current revival, which started in Houston last spring and winds up on Broadway next year, after a 25-city tour does just that

The delightful Carol Channing brings "Hello Dolly" to the Arie Crown Theater.

This year's film festival bigger, better than last

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Do you ever get tired of all the hypes and the pans?

Would you like, just for once, to see a movie before the ads and reviews tell you what you're supposed to think? Well here's your chance.

The 13th Chicago International Film Festival opens tonight promising to be bigger, and probably better, than ever.

DURING THE NEXT three weeks the festival will present more than 40 feature films from more than 20 nations, plus several special programs and appearances by filmmakers. There will be 29 U.S. premieres, and three world premieres. Last year's festival had 30 features and lasted just two weeks.

Prices have gone up this year, too, from $3 to $3.50 for most events. The festival is completely open to the public, but tickets for the major events are reportedly going fast.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at the festival office, 415 N. Dearborn St., or by phoning-in your Master Charge number to 644-3400. Tickets for most events will also be available at the box offices of the three theaters where the films will be shown: The Granada, 6427 N. Sheridan Rd.; the Biograph, 2433 N. Lincoln Ave.; and the Lamar, 120 S. Marion St., Oak Park.

Complete festival schedules are available at the festival office and the three theaters.

Festival director Michael Kutza is famous for coming up with a wide range of films, from the sublime to the hopelessly dense. If you want to play critic and take your chances, try any film. If not, here are a few films and programs that should be pretty safe bets:

"Equus" Film adaptation of the Peter Shaffer psychological drama, directed by Sidney Lumet and starring most of the original cast, including Richard Burton and Peter Firth. Opening presentation of the festival at 8:15 p.m. tonight at the Granada. Equus begins its regular run at Chicago commercial theaters Wednesday.

Mel Brooks Tribute All night marathon of five Brooks features begins at midnight Saturday at the Granada. Brooks will discuss his films in person Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. at the Granada.

"THREE WARRIORS" American Indian boy rediscovers his roots during a visit to his aged grandfather. Adults free when accompanied by a child. World premiere. Saturday at 4 p.m. at the Lamar and Nov. 13 at 2 p.m. at the Granada.

"Padre, Padrone" Winner of both the grand prize and the critics prize at the Cannes Film Festival. True story of Sardinian peasant boy who overcomes his father's brutality to become a soldier and scholar. Italian, with English subtitles. Nov. 22 at 9:15 p.m. at the Granda.

Lindsay Anderson Tribute Three-part program honoring the English director of "If" and "This Sporting Life." Screening of his documentary films at 3 p.m. Nov. 12 at the Biograph; personal interview by London Times critic David Robinson and screening of "O! Lucky Man," at 2 p.m. Nov. 13 at the Biograph; more Anderson films at the Biograph at 9:15 p.m. Nov. 14. Anderson will appear at all three programs.

"The Ascent" U.S. premiere of the U.S.S.R.'s winning entry to the Berlin Festival. Tense World War II drama. Nov. 11 at 6:30 p.m. at the Biograph, Nov. 14 at 6:30 and 8:40 at the Lamar, and Nov. 17 at 6:30 p.m. at the Granada. Russian with English subtitles.

"J. A. Martin, Photographer" French-Canadian film about a woman and her husband who spends more time in the darkroom than with his family. Monique Mercure won the best actress prize at Cannes for her portrayal of the wife. French, with English subtitles. Saturdey at 6:30 p.m. at the Biograph and Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the Granada.

"Private Vice and Public Virtue" Orgiastic fantasy by Hungarian director Miklos Jansco, with English subtitles. Saturday at 9:15 p.m. at the Granada, and Nov. 12 at 9:15 p.m. at the Biograph.

"One Sings, the Other Doesn't" French filmmaker Agnes Varda's tale of two women pursuing different careers, one as a singer and one as an unwed mother. Nov. 12 at 9:15 p.m. at the Granada, and Nov. 14 at 6:30 p.m. at the Biograph. French, with English subtitles.

Best of the Festival Shorts, documentaries and the festival's best feature film. Nov. 23 at 6:30 p.m. at the Granada.

"Private Vice and Public Virtue, left and "Equus" — two of the better films in the Chicago Film Festival.

ON HIS WAY to start a worm farm with some former war buddies, Jack (Henry Winkler) meets Carol (Sally Field) and the two troubled people begin a warm, poignant relationship.

'Heroes' is a war film with heart

Review/movies

"Heroes", starring Henry Winkler, Sally Field, Harrison Ford; directed by Jeremy Paul Kagan; produced by David Foster and Lawrence Turman; released by Universal Studios. Rated PG.

by DAN GIRE

Henry Winkler and Sally Field shine in their roles as misfit lovers in "Heroes," a sensitive story that isn't exceptionally hilarious or romantic, but extremely touching, nonetheless.

Winkler easily drops his celebrated character, Fonz, of television's "Happy Days," to become Jack Dunne, a troubled Viet Nam veteran whose constant trouble with police repeatedly lands him inside a New York Hospital.

Eager to make a go of life, Dunne escapes from the hospital and plans to travel to Eureka, Calif., where he intends to build a worm farm with $1,000 donated by his fellow vets.

ON THE BUS to the West Coast, Dunne meets Carol Bell (Emmy-award winning Sally Field) a young woman with troubles of her own. She's getting married the following Sunday, but she is taking a bus trip to Kansas "to think things out."

Dunne takes a liking to Carol, but she can't stand the zany antics of the man who is interfering with her thoughts.

As the two travel farther and farther west, they begin to realize they are out of step with the world but not with each other.

The most significant part of "Heroes" isn't the relationship that develops between Jack and Carol. It's a deeper, more subtle story of a Vietnam vet trying to liberate himself from memories of a war that have left his mind scarred.

WINKLER TREATS Dunne with compassion and empathy. On the surface, Dunne is as normal as anyone would appear to be. But his manner, his eyes, say something is wrong—something is out of whack.

"Heroes" gives an audience a chance to see the plight of vets in a seemingly insensitive society that forgot the soldiers as quickly as it forgot the war.

The film doesn't dwell on opening old memories of the war. Writer James Carabatsos, with David Freeman, has produced a meaningful message in "Heroes" without sacrificing strong entertainment value.

The script coupled with Jeremy Paul Kagan's direction puts Jack Dunne on a one-to-one relationship with the audience, who wants to see him succeed in his worm farm venture and conquer the past.

HARRISON FORD (who catapulted to fame as the cocky intergalatic smuggler in "Star Wars") is outstanding in his supporting role as Ken Boyd, one of Dunne's Army buddies who also is having trouble coping with the real world.

In contrast to Dunne's optimism, Boyd has no motivation. He shuns life's challenges He is content to sit with a beer in hand and reminisce about fighting the war Dunne so desperately needs to forget. Ford's portrayal is so believable viewers will swear they've met a Ken Boyd sometime in their lives.

"Heroes" is good entertainment because it captures moments. Moments of laughter, anger, frustration, loneliness and love.

"Heroes" has heart.

Movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing the area, plus capsule summaries and comments. Films reviewed are rated excellent, four stars; good, three stars; fair, two stars and poor, one star.

"Bobby Deerfield" — Al Pacino and Marthe Keller star in this marvelously subtle love story. The acting and direction are soggy, but the script's existential theme is crisp and moving. (PG) ★★★½

"Damnation Alley" — Good special effects and "surround" sound makes this one of the more enjoyable sci-fi adventures since "Star Wars." Starring George Peppard and Paul Winfield. (PG) ★★★

"Looking for Mr. Goodbar" — Diane Keaton bar-hops dashingly in this sensationalized adaptation of Judith Rossner's best seller. Keaton's brilliant performance, however, doesn't save the film from becoming a pointless, and ultimately sexist display of sex and violence. (R) ★★

"One on One" — A young man zooms to college on a basketball scholarship, fails to make the grade and gets in trouble with a mighty mean coach in this likable serio-comic saga. Gym scenes are fun and convincing. Robby Benson stars.(PG)

"Oh God!" — A clever script, a charming George Burns as God and a totally believable John Denver as a modern day Moses who carries God's message to the people makes for a delightful, entertaining film. (PG) ★★★

"MacArthur" — Gregory Peck puts in a lot of hard work as the controversial general who swore he would return, but this bvggraphy of MacArthur's later years is too talky and ponderously structured to make a great general movie like "Patton." (PG). ★★½

Philharmonic makes debut tonight

Bill Gowen
Classical music

When Maestro Fred Lewis raises his baton for the downbeat to Franz Josef Haydn's "Miracle" Symphony tonight at The Auditorium Theatre he hopes that work's title is an omen.

For tonight is the night the Chicago Philharmonic Society hopes to bring a miracle to Chicago and the suburbs: a second major symphony orchestra.

"We see ourselves as eventually becoming the second major orchestra in Chicago," says Philharmonic President Joel Johnson. "We're here to complement, not to replace existing musical forces. In fact, one of our staunchest vocal supporters is John Edwards, the Chicago Symphony's general manager."

THE CHICAGO Philharmonic is not a brand-new idea. Johnson and the society's board have been organizing and "test marketing" for more than four years with pilot concerts. Tonight's concert represents the first regularly scheduled program in a downtown series, but Lewis has been leading the orchestra in area programs for many months.

Tonight's program, which starts at 8 p.m., will be followed by concerts at The Auditorium on Dec. 16, Jan. 7 and Jan. 13. A spring series is also in the planning stage.

"We have three immediate goals," said Johnson. "First, we want to serve people within the corporate limits of Chicago. Second, we're planning a series of concerts in the suburban arena, which will encompass communities from Indiana to Wisconsin. Third, we have organized a program in which we will visit schools in the entire metropolitan area. We've recently played in Joliet and we have programs planned for Kankakee and Waukegan, for example."

ABOUT 35 CONCERTS will be given in the orchestra's 1978-79 season with the same number in the suburbs and a slightly smaller number in the schools. "Our goal is to take music to the people," said Johnson, who noted a trip to Barrington is planned for December.

Lewis has built an orchestra of 63 persons for tonight's concert. He auditioned ("I call them hearings") many players from throughout the country for the available positions.

"Right now we're paying our players on a 'per-service' basis (for each concert or rehearsal)," said Johnson. "Within two years we'd like to be able to offer a full-time contract for a basic 32-week schedule, plus a four-week summer festival."

The standard symphony orchestra numbers more than 100 players. Why so small a number at this time for the Philharmonic?

"I feel that we should have the best possible players . . . that it's best to build a solid foundation," said Lewis. "You'd be amazed at the marvelous players in this area who have not had a home, musically speaking. While we're favoring Chicago-area players, we've hired people from orchestras in Rochester, Philadelphia, Milwaukee and Los Angeles, for example. They're all professional players of the highest caliber."

THE ORCHESTRA'S concertmaster for the premiere series will be the famed Israeli-American violinist, David Ehrlich. "I know Mr. Ehrlich to be among the very finest violinists that I have heard," said Lewis. "I know that his administrative role as concertmaster will give an indelible stamp to the string quality of our orchestra."

The Auditorium series will utilize a front-of-stage concert platform similar to the one used by Chicago Symphony founder Frederick Stock when he used the Auditorium in the pre-Orchestra Hall days at the turn of the century.

Ticket prices are reasonable, from a $1 student admission to the gallery up to $12 tops for box seats.

Subscriptions for each concert series are available at six price levels, $8 (upper balcony) to $43 (box seats). Main floor series tickets run $20 to $24 for the four concerts ($6.50 to $8 singly) and $12 to $20 for the lower balcony.

THE SOCIETY HAS been actively engaged in ticket sales. "We're going about our campaign in a concerted way," said Johnson. "We're working heavily in group sales as well as single sales both locally and from our suburban audience. So far our subscription response has been good."

But symphony orchestras cost money — big money. Can the Philharmonic make it financially?

"Most musical organizations can't come near making the break-even point on box-office revenues alone," said Johnson. "That is true even when the Lyric Opera and Chicago Symphony play to nearly capacity every night. One of our goals is to present concerts which don't have deficits. We feel we can do this because first, we don't have the tremendous expenses of other musical organizations and second, our ticket prices and suburb and school programs make the orchestra within reach of anybody."

Of course the orchestra is studying other means of income through its development program, including federal and state grants and support from area businesses.

BUT THE MUSIC itself is the key. If it is good the audience will be there, pure and simple.

"I'm very anxious to see how our programs will be received," said Lewis, who has selected an artistic committee of five to plan the music end of the operation.

"I'm very excited about it," added the maestro. "For example, in our all-Mozart program on Jan. 7 we not only play the famous "Jupiter Symphony (No. 41), but we play the First Symphony . . . a marvelous work that offers an interesting contrast of the development of Mozart as a composer."

Tonight's program includes the Eric Satie "Gymnopedes Nos. 1 and 3," the Igor Stavinsky "Dumbarton Oaks" concerto and concludes with the familiar Beethoven Seventh Symphony, in addition to the opening Haydn "Miracle" symphony.

Anyone desiring ticket information can call the society at 663-1488.

Dwight Twilley Band mixes the best of rock

by ROB PATTERSON

Dwight Twilley plays the kind of rock and roll that once would have been banned from the pulpits. He almost regrets that times have changed.

"Now it's like all these critics are saying 'Well, on this cut the guitarist plays a tasty little riff that's nice . . . but not emotional enough and blah, blah, blah.' I think we've elevated rock and roll so far that maybe we should bring it back down a bit."

I would have argued the point with anyone else, but after hearing the Dwight Twilley Band's long-awaited second lp — "Twilley Don't Mind" — I would see his point. With the able assistance of his sidekick, drummer-vocalist Phil Seymour, Twilley has created an lp that takes rock back to its roots with a vengeance.

USING THE Beatles and Elvis as models, the Twilleys create rock and roll that is true to the music's essence — a strong, clear back-beat, gritty guitars and silky smooth harmonies. Add to that a flair for writing songs that sound like hits — pure and simple — and you've got what just might be the answer to the rock and roll doldrums we're facing in the 70s.

How did two guys from Tulsa, Okla., make an album that invites favorable comparisons with "Beatles 65"?

"It might have had something to do with us listening to the 'Beatles Story' album," Seymour says. "It was a documentary with these little parts in it where they're talking . . . and I guess we were just better at picking up those lines and making an English accent than most people. We started looking that way, and sounding that way . . ."

BUT DON'T LET the influences fool you into thinking this is mere copycatism. At a time when most rock stars are manufactured, Twilley is one who just may have been borne a star. It seems when Dwight picked up the guitar at age 15 he knew so little that he couldn't play anyone ele's songs, so he turned to composing.

"We immediately had to make a record," says Dwight, which meant coming home after school, cranking up his father's ancient reel-to-reel recorder and doing their stuff. "It was purely garage-type level, maybe lower," Twilley admits, but the acetates the local radio station pressed from their tapes earned the band (then Oister) a hard core following among Tulsa teens.

A proverbial trip to Nashville in Dwight's '58 Chevy landed them one night in Memphis, where they randomly picked a recording studio out of the phone book — Sun Records. Not knowing that they'd stumbled onto one of the studios that gave birth to rock 'n' roll (Elvis, Jerry Lee Lewis, Johnny Cash and Charlie Rich all started here), Dwight and Phil met Ray Harris, tn old-time Sun producer who whipped some power into their music with his recording guidance.

DISCovering rock

A few years and many tapes later, Dwight and Phil headed out to L.A., where they landed a deal with, interestingly enough, the Tulsa-based Shelter label of Leon Russell. After cutting some tracks in L.A., the Twilleys journeyed to England to get a little of the real British inspiration for the album. On their return to the States, they found they had a top 20 hit with "I'm on Fire" as a welcome home.

UNFORTUNATELY Shelter's tangled legal problems kept the first album — "Sincerely" — from following the single for six months. A follow-up album was put on hold for a year.

After finally striking a deal with Arista Records, the Twilleys returned to the studio. The result is "Twilley Don't Mind," their Everyman album.

But what makes the Twilley's peculiar mix so different? "The music today is just too mature and adult-oriented," Twilley says. "It's corny to play for your peers, because rock 'n' roll is supposed to be this crazy stuff for kids. It sometimes seems like there's nobody out there we can be compared with . . . which is a strange position to be in."

Back in the late '60s when Dwight Twilley was making like a Beatle in the heartland of America, four English teen-agers were plugging into the power of the blues. Two years ago, they found one another in a poverty-stricken last-ditch attempt to break into the business. And the "Babys" were born.

Today, they're got five national TV appearances, two albums ("The Babys" and "Broken Heart," Chrysalis) and a chart-climbing single ("Isn't It Time") under their belts. Their second stateside tour, currently in progress, is a sell-out. If the Babys haven't made it to the top, it's not from lack of effort.

"WE STARTED with the idea of gettin' back to just havin' four fellas on stage playin' serious music," says bassist-lead singer John Waite. "We were sick of all the theatrical garbage."

Likewise, the Babys stage show can be described in one word — tight. As a singer, Waite doesn't quite have the sandpapered edge to his voice that marks the best blues vocalists, but he more than compensates with power, range and sincerity. The band's backbone is its resounding rhythm.

They've developed a fine meshing of Waite's bass, Tony Brock's kamikaze-style of drumming and Mike Corby's melodic rhythm guitar lines. And upon this foundation flourishes some of the best lead guitar work to be heard in years. Wally Stocker knows how to make those steel strings sing. The man has soul and talent to spare.

Anyone who can remember what British-based blues sounded like before it fell victim to its own over-indulgence can appreciate what the Babys are doing.

Cromwell's is good to go back to

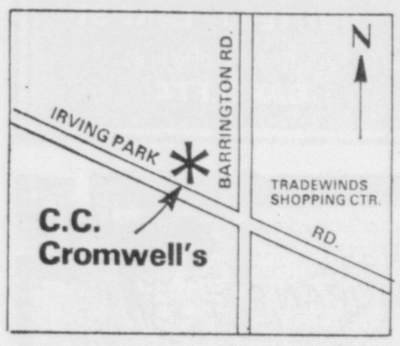
RATING: ★★★★



by JOYCE LOFSTROM
Food Editor

The promise of a return visit probably is the best compliment any patron, reviewer or not, can pay a restaurant. Without a doubt, C. C. Cromwell's, 1236 Irving Park Rd. Streamwood, deserves such flattery. A cheery establishment adorned with Tiffany lamps, hanging plants and stained glass windows above each booth, Cromwell's offers an evening of delicious food and personalized service.

For appetizers and dinner entrees, it's difficult to know where to begin because the menu is filled with variety. Appetizers include escargot, gazpacho and saganaki, a flaming Greek cheese. But for the more conservative appetite, there's French onion soup or broiled mushrooms, our choice for the first course.

The heyday of the mushroom appetizer continues, especially the french fried variety. But a broiled mushroom? Abandon all doubts, these mushrooms were in a word, succulent. We received six large mushrooms, broiled in butter with subtle seasonings and perhaps a light wine. At $1.75, this dish is just a preview of the meal to come.

Bill o' fare

NOW FOR THE main attraction, dinner. Whatever you fancy, you'll find it at Cromwell's Barbeque specialties, the favorite of our waitress, include beef, chicken, ribs, or for the indecisive, a combination plate billed as "moo-peep-oink." Although we passed by the "Smokehouse specialties," our evening at Cromwell's could be called "moo-peep-gurggle."

We began with a salad, a simple introduction of only lettuce and carrot curls. Topped with the house dressing of vinegar and oil, which was blended with Greek seasonings, the salad with a basket of rolls was an adequate filler while waiting for the meal to come.

A beef and vegetable combination, the sirloin brochette or kebab arrived with tender pink chunks of beef skewered with pieces of onion, green pepper and mushrooms. Chicken Kiev, a deep-fat fried boneless chicken breast with a pat of season butter tucked inside, is hidden beneath a blanket of Hollandaise sauce at Cromwell's. For a seafood delight, try the stuffed flounder, a generous portion of delicately flavored fish filled with crabmeat.

THE DINNERS include salad and choice of potato; our entrees also were served with rice. Unless you arrive ravenously hungry, either rice or potato will provide that comfortably full feeling with room to spare for dessert.

Service at Cromwell's is tailored to the individual. If you want the sauce on the side or an entree without the rice or potato, just ask. The friendliness and honesty of our waitress added a dining-at-home feeling, a service not every restaurant can claim.

The meal could have ended at this point with a cup of coffee and a few moments of conversation. But in the spirit of good eating, we opted for strawberry shortcake, with extra spoons. We passed up cheesecake, with or without strawberries, brandy ice and an ice cream avalanche aptly named "C.C.'s Downfall."

A combination of whipped cream, ice cream, sweetened berries and pound cake, the shortcake had all the trimmings of a landslide dessert and provides satisfaction at $1.95.

Open since May, Cromwell's also offers omelettes, sandwiches, a meal-in-one salad and deli specialties with most choices less than $3; all entrees include salad or potato. Dinner entrees range from $4.25 to $8.50 for steak; $3.95 to $5.95 for barbeque and $4.59 to $5.25 for seafood.

Needless to say, convincing herself to apply for a hostess spot at Chicago's Lawrence of Oregano was no easy task: "God, it took me so much courage . . . I must have dialed a million times before I got enough nerve to ask for an audition," she says. "I called every friend I'd ever had, they packed the house . . . and I did get the job."

Karen met her piano players and arranger-to-be, Brian Lasser, while juggling songs and salad plates at Lawrence's. When he moved on to Le-Pub, a Lincoln Park gay bar, he wrangled her an audition — and it was there that Karen made the break from other writers' conceptions of musical comedy to her own.

Though she had a bad case of stage jitters at first ("I just sang the songs . . . when I didn't have any lines to deliver, I didn't have anything to say"), Karen was bolstered by the reception from her gay audiences.

"If I'd played in a straight club, I'd have to gear the act on a sexual basis. But the gays were looking for good music — they wanted to be entertained, and they could identify with the feelings in my songs."

Those melodies had plenty of feeling, she recalls.

"I'm really an emotional person, and the way I respond is all based on an emotional level. When I started out, I guess I really identified with loneliness."

THOUGH SHE'D joined Weight Watchers before starting at Le Pub, Karen admittedly "still has a long way to go." Her weight problem, coupled with a chronic lack of dates, endeared her to melancholy ballads: "I'd sing 35 minutes of ballads, and people would come up and tell me their problems . . . I was really getting depressed!"

But it was on the strength of those tear-jerkers that Karen landed an open spot at Park West, the swank new nightclub that's featured such "biggies" as Anthony Newley and Paul Williams.

During her "triumphant return" to the Park West late last month, Karen reminded her enthusiastic fans, "The sadder the song, the happier I am." But this time around, it's hard to believe.

Not only has she lost 37 pounds (and still counting) but the woman someone once compared to a Skokie housewife is jockeying wardrobe advice from designers, taking jazz dance lessons, and has an honest-to-God social life.

She can still elicit misty eyes with "Younger Girls," a song written by arranger Lasser, but there's also that deliciously flamboyant rendition of "Chasin' the Blues Away." She does just that.

The future? Looking past her next Park West date Nov. 18, Karen wouldn't mind patterning her career after Barbara Streisand's "I'd like to have the power and the choices she's got." But at the same time, Judy Garland's vulnerability strikes a chord, too.

"I've got to lay my cards on the table and say, 'This is me.' You open hourself up for a lot of pain, but it's the only way.

"There's nothing worse than an entertainer who does the same thing over and over again . . . the one thing that scares me is turning 50 and saying, 'I wish I had.' "

WHEREVER SHE winds up, at 26, Karen Mason can afford to thumb her nose at the experts who told her, "You'll never make it unless you lose 40 pounds and do "Feelings."

She may be losing the excess baggage, but "Chicago's newest rising star" is busy proving that Barry Manilow hasn't cornered the market in success.

Channing works charm on Chicago

— and according to its star, Dolly's plight still captures the public's fancy.

"It's the story of a woman at the turn of the century who has no way of making an income — a widow pulling herself up by her bootstraps. The audience really hopes she'll make it," said Miss Channing. "She's a winner, and we all root for winners."

SHE CONTENDS the current tour has garnered better responses than the first one, partly because "it's not controversial anymore — they know what they're getting for their money."

But there's also an emergence from the Vietnam era when "we were all downers and losers," a growing affinity for optimistic musicals like "Annie" and "I Love My Wife."

Whatever the reason for the current "Hello Dolly" hurrahs, Miss Channing obviously is basking in the glow, as well as creating some of her own.

Much of that exuberance — "I feel healthier than the whole company put together" — can be traced to a health food diet that's been in effect since 1957, when Miss Channing learned that she was allergic to sprays and additives in food. Now she has all her food flown in from a cooperative farm in California, and says the special victuals are crucial to her ambiance: "If I get some sprays and insecticides inside me, my soul is quite crippled."

THE "WILD RICE and all that" evidently has done the trick. The actress who played Lorelei Lee in "Glentlemen Prefer Blondes" and wacky Muzzy in "Thoroughly Modern Millie" regales you with anecdotes about her diamonds and show biz debut on the stage of her grade school assembly hall.

And she's still proud of the fact that she made Richard Nixon's hate list: "It's the most distinguished thing I'll ever do. I never had a profound political thought in my life — but then Joe Namath was on it, too, and he doesn't even know who the President is."

But behind trademark giggle and delightfully dizzy image, Carol Channing is serious about both the "Hello Dolly" revival and musicals themselves.

By her own admission, the famous matchmaker has "crystalized inside me . . . I don't have to reach for her as hard as I once did." Yet Miss Channing still is convinced that comedy is "the most serious type of theater."

"If you can sing and dance your character, you have the soul . . . you've got her the way God made her."

The doctor says

Diets must take fat into account

My friend and I have recently joined a club to lose weight — a lot of weight, and we are supposed to count our calories and keep a record of all foods we eat.

How much do you count for fats in a meal? I cut all fats, trim my meats, and stopped using butter, Crisco and margarine, along with cutting out my sugar and sweets. My friend contends that sweets are enough to omit, that the fats don't make that much difference.

She and her family live on hamburgers and French fries, fried chicken, pizza with sausage and that type of food. They all have upset stomachs and diarrhea and all are overweight and nervous. Will you comment please?

The facts are that there are nine calories in one gram of fat, and about four calories in a gram of carbohydrates or protein. Even worse, fat tissue contains less water than muscle (lean) or the bulk vegetables and fruits. The water content affects the calorie count also.

Sugar contains a lot of calories because it contains almost no water. It is dehydrated and refined beet or cane juice. Usually the best place to cut calories from a diet is to eliminate all the fat that you can and eliminate the concentrated sweets such as sugar, candies, syrups, jellies and the like.

There will be some fat in almost all foods. Even fresh fruit contains a small amount of fat. There is fat in corn — hence corn oil — and some in most vegetables. But these amounts of fat are small compared to the amounts found in high fat foods, such as untrimmed pork chops, cold cuts, processed or cured cheese and the like.

To diet properly you really need to have an idea of the actual calorie count of various foods you eat, whether the calories are from starches, sweets, fat or protein.

I have been taking vitamins A, B, C, and D for a year now. A nurse told me if I took Vitamin E, I would not need A, B, C, and D. My doctor says take a multiple vitamin mixture which includes A, B, C and D. What do you recommend½

I recommend following the advice you paid your doctor for.

You have either misquoted the nurse or she knows almost nothing about nutrition. Vitamin E has none of the important functions of A, B, C and D. Vitamins have different purposes in the metabolic system. If you don't get enough vitamin C you get scurvy. If you were seriously deficient in D you would get rickets. Vitamin E doesn't prevent either. In fact, vitamin E is a vitamin in search of a disease. There is no known human disease caused by a lack of vitamin E.

I think people should try to get all their vitamins and minerals from a well-balanced diet.. But for those who do not eat properly, for one reason or another, or have an increased need for vitamins, then an inexpensive, all-purpose vitamin capsule that contains the Recommended Daily Dietary Allowance values is the best solution.

Select kids' sneakers with the proper care

Tip To Parents: Sneakers or tennis shoes for active kids should be bought as carefully as leather shoes. Soles should have deep treads to grip ground or grass and prevent falls. And kids who wear them for hours at a time ought to have sneakers with arch supports and, if possible, with some way to ventilate (since fungi and foot odors grow best in moist shoes).

For protection of their toes, as well as enabling better performance in activities like soccer, kickball and touch football, sneakers should have rubber-or cloth-reinforced toes. Leather and athletic shoes with metal toe reinforcements are inappropriate and even dangerous for children who are not highly trained in sports. An accidental kick from these can produce a painful injury. Also, check sneakers for proper fit as often as you would other shoes. Ill-fitting shoes can cause accidents and hinder proper foot growth.

Battle of the best goes on at WBBM

If it's possible for a television news organization to have too much of a good thing, then WBBM-TV has one too many good anchormen.

As far as Channel 2 management is concerned, that's a blessing rather than a problem. But, that's not the way the station's veteran anchorman Bill Kurtis sees it.

There is no question that the station was marrying the best with the best when it brought Mort Crim to Chicago in August to share the 6 p.m. anchordesk with Kurtis.

CHANNEL 2 WAS lucky enough to have its cake anl eat it too by having Kurtis continue anchoring the 10 p.m. newscast with his 4½-year partner Walter Jacobson

But, with three months of the new arrangement behind them, there remains an uneasiness at Channel 2.

David Nelson, newly appointed general manager of WBBM-TV, says it is nothing more than "the usual anxiety and uneasiness" that comes with the pairing of an able veteran newsanchor and another real pro from the outside.

But Kurtis says that "working out the relationship has been difficult" and that the change "could have some serious ramifications."

PART OF THE problem seems to be that Kurtis and Crim are too much alike to be sitting side-by-side for an hour each weekday anchoring the news. There is no contrast between them as there is between Kurtis and Jacobson.

The other part of the problem, Kurtis said, is that there has not been enough communication between management and Kurtis about the anchordesk changes to clarify what his role at the station will continue to be.

Kurtis is the only newsman in Chicago who is asked to share the anchordesk with two men during two newscasts every night.

"My fear is that people will become confused about what I'm supposed to be. I have always been like the father figure with Walter and I still maintain that role at 10 p.m.," Kurtis said. "But, now the 6 p.m. newscast is a whole different story. It's a problem and one one that has yet to be resolved."

KURTIS CONTENDS he wouldn't be doing so much wondering if management had just sat down with him and Jacobson, after announcing that Crim would be coming to the station, to discuss their continuing anchor roles.

"When it was announced that Mort was coming, I read about it in the papers. When he started on the news show, the powers that be deliberately changed the show and gave him extra duties to help him," Kurtis said. "There was absolutely no communication between management and myself and Walter about it. We did not understand how this was supposed to affect our roles at the station.

"When I asked them (management), they told me that they wrre bringing in Mort because they thought I was going to work for the network news. I said I was flattered, but that I had no immediate plans for that," he said.

Kurtis has admitted openly that he would like to return to the CBS network news. He served as a West Coast Bureau correspondent for CBS from 1970 to 1973 afetr having spent four years reporting and anchoring at WBBM-TV. He was "persuaded" to return to Chicago where he remains under contract through January 1978.

KURTIS SAID HE has been offered, and because of contractual binds has turned down, several tempting offers, but that none are pending.

So what other reasons would the station have for rearranging a news team that has, over the past four years, made steady and impressive progress in improving the news show and the ratings?

Maybe management was making a power play in bringing Crim to Chicago by reminding Kurtis and Jacobson, who has had his own run-ins with the boys at the top, that they are not indispensable.

Maybe management just wants some insurance in case Kurtis should take a job with network news sooner than they think.

MAYBE IT WAS JUST a matter of snatching up another top-rate anchorman when the opportunity presented itself.

KURTIS AND JACOBSON

Chances are it was all that and more, but the man who made the final decision — WBBM-TV's former general manager Neil Derrough — has left Chicago to accept a similar position with WCBS-TV in New York, leaving his successor to answer all the questions.

"Of course, there is a risk in breaking up news team tradition, but I believe the changes have made the station stronger," Nelson said. "We have two very strong and very good nesmen working together and maybe they don't each attract different audiences, but I think together they will attract increased viewers."

"There is no doubt about the fact that better communication between management and Bill and Walter at the time of the change would have made the transition smoother," he said. Since taking on his new post several weeks ago, he has had separate lengthy discussions with Kurtis and Crim, he said.

COMMUNICATIONS WERE so poor, Kurtis said, that he and his lawyer made a visit to Derrough's office just after Crim went on the air to clarify the fact that Kurtis remains the station's lead anchor.

Certainly Kurtis has earned the right to demand that his role at the station be clarified and that is place as lead anchor be protected.

For my money, he is an excellent example of what a television news anchorman should be. He has been a major part of an effort during the past four years to turn WBBM-TV's news operation around and make it the most respected news shop in town.

Then again, Crim is worth his weight in gold to the station, too.

With a healthy professional respect for one another, Kurtis and Crim have not allowed any off-camera uneasiness to interfere with their on-camera performance.

THEY ARE BOTH excellent newsmen who were made from the same mold and who have tried to handle tactfully any ego-bruising that might have come with the change. Like any new anchor partnership, theirs will take some time to develop.

Meanwhile there is the question of whether they are just too much alike on camera to be working together and whether management is really doing anything to help the situation.

Kurtis sas he and Crim are personally attempting to work the kinks out of their new on-camera marraige. The station bosses apparently have created quite a quandary, assuring Kurtis 60 per cent of the newscast and offering Crim 50 per cent.

"The ultimate test will be with the viewers. There has been no immediate change in the ratings to reflect their attitudes toward the new team," Kurtis said. "So only time will tell."

But what continues to go on behind-the-scenes is as important as the ratings, because it will ultimately make or break a news team.

'Dolly' glistens, glows as Channing stops show

Review/theater

"Wow, oh wow fellas — look at the old girl now, fellas!" — "Hello Dolly!"

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

A number of Dollies have passed out their calling cards in the past 14 years, but to many "Hello Dolly!" fans, no one deserves a once-over more than Carol Channing.

With that orange hair, those luminous eyes, and that indescribable voice, the girl who made diamonds her best friend packed 'em in during her seven-year run as the venerable matchmaker and purveyor of everything from corsets to dance lessons. She's back now, perching on waiters' knees and talking to her departed husband, and it's just as though she's never left.

But if you come to the Arie Crown theater at McCormick Place expecting this show to be little more than a nostalgia trip with Miss Channing at the wheel, better raise your expectations.

UNDER THE TAUT direction of Lucia Victor, this new production shines. Jack Everly's orchestra gets your toes tapping even before the curtain rises; Oliver Smith's settings are both unobtrusive and memorable.

The touring company members kick up their heels as though they couldn't imagine spending these three hours anywhere else. And during a number like "Put on Your Sunday Clothes," with that glorious parade of pink top hats, canary yellow tuxedos, and a locomotive spewing steam, neither can I.

Solid performances by Eddie Bracken as the "half-millionaire," Horace Vandergelder, Le Roy Reams as the gee-whiz store clerk, Cornelius Hackle, and Florence Lacey as Mrs. Molloy all help "Hello Dolly!" avoid the "tired old musical" label.

But when Miss Channing makes that famous entrance down the stairs of the Harmonia Gardens restaurant, a luminous vision in red sequins, outrageous feather plume, and ear-to-ear grin, it's easy to see why she's often considered the one and only Dolly Gallagher Levi.

YES, SHE STEALS the show — several times. She can bring on waves of applause whether she's simply gliding across stage or wolfing down that expensive meal at Harmonic Gardens.

Miss Channing does play up to her audience, to the point of almost ignoring her counterparts at times. But the gestures and grimaces are so perfect, her "Veeeandergelder" intoned with such panache, that you don't mind one whit.

After all, when she delivers the line "money is like manure — it's not worth a thing unless it's spread around" in that spine-tingling barotone, nothing else seems as wonderful.

There are plenty of moments like that in the new "Hello Dolly!" Do yourself a favor and catch them — you'll be hard-pressed to find their caliber again.

Old music in attic? It could aid study

The University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana is trying to locate as many sources as possible for the study of music in the United States from colonial times to World War II.

The project is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The kinds of things people might find in their attics may yield treasures for the scholars conducting the search. Of interest are collections of sheet music; old music written by hand; anything documenting the local musical scene, including diaries, concert programs, letters and photographs and early cylinders and records.

Anyone having these materials or knowing of their whereabouts should contact the local public library or the Rescourses of American Music History Music Building, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., 61801.

NOW APPEARING at the Top of the Hilton, Arlington Heights, is Reflection, a seven-member group featuring the Discipio sisters, Vince DiBartolo, Mike Lumpp, Ron Roberts and Bob Fisher. Show continues through Nov. 19.

Don't Waste Fuel Dollars

First, some straight talk

Let's face it. It costs you more every year to heat or cool your home no matter what type of fuel you use. And chances are the cost will continue to rise. So, there's no better time than right now to insulate your home with Insulspray foam insulation.
Common sense will save you dollars.

Why Insulspray?

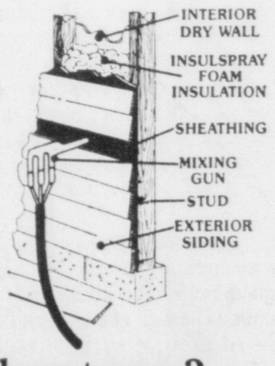
In most homes, more heat escapes through the walls than from anywhere else. New Insulspray foam insulation effectively reduces costly heat loss through walls as never before possible. In hot weather it works just as well to keep cool air in. Insulspray makes your home more comfortable to live in and much more economical to live with.

What is Insulspray?

Insulspray is a non-toxic, two-part insulation system made of liquid urea-formaldehyde resin plus a hardener containing a foaming agent.
The urea-formaldehyde and hardener are fed, under pressure, into a specifically designed mixing gun. The two components are ejected from the gun as a liquid foam consisting of millions of tiny air cells, highly effective in reducing heat loss in winter and heat intake in summer.

How is Insulspray installed?

Insulspray is installed from the outside, without mess, and usually in one day.
It is applied directly into the hollow stud space within the outer walls of your home. It flows up and down, around obstacles and fills every crack and crevice. Insulspray leaves no uninsulated pockets.
In a few days, the foam completely sets and forms a permanent insulating layer within the wall cavity.



What are the advantages?

First and foremost, Insulspray reduces costly heat loss through the walls of your home where it occurs most. It sets up a barrier to block the natural tendency of heat to flow from warm to cold surfaces of building materials. Consequently, your home stays warmer in winter, cooler in summer. And your fuel costs drop considerably.
